Balanced federal budget could could cost Idaho millions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — States that are considering calling for a constitutional amendment to balance the federal budget were cautioned Sunday to consider the possibility they themselves would be among the big losers.

Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., head of a House Budget Committee task force studying the move to limit federal spending, wrote the governor of each of the 50 states suggesting how much federal money each might lose if the federal budget were balanced in 1980.

Idaho, the study said, could lose up to $121 million in federal money now being channeled to the state.

California, whose governor, Edmund Brown Jr., has been a principal advocate of the drive to require a balanced federal budget, would have the biggest potential loss, $3.6 billion, according to Obey's figures.

He said New York could lose $3.3 billion, and Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Texas each could lose more than $1 billion.

Obey arrived at these figures by taking the $83 billion state and local governments are projected to receive from Washington in 1980 and scaling them back to their 1975 levels.

This, he said, would eliminate the $29 billion federal deficit the president projects for 1980 and result in a slight surplus.

"I am not advocating that this happen," Obey wrote the governors. "But I am suggesting ... when Congress responds to any demands for reducing the federal deficit, that grants to states and localities are among the most likely targets."

The grants include revenue sharing, Medicaid, highway aid, welfare and many other programs. The reason they would be so vulnerable, Obey said, is that other major areas of the budget are very hard to cut.

Forty percent of the federal budget is in Social Security, veterans pensions and other federal payments made directly to individuals.

Obey said large defense cuts are "politically unrealistic," interest on the public debt is automatic and only so much fat can be found in a group of domestic programs including the FBI, the Weather Service, the Coast Guard and the courts.

Actually, most proposals to balance the federal budget do not call for this as early as 1980. The National Governors Association supports federal balance in 1981.

President Carter's budget projections indicate the budget will almost balance itself in 1981 because of the increased revenues inflation brings, unless taxes are cut or large new programs launched.

Legislatures of 28 states, including Idaho, have asked for a constitutional convention to amend the Constitution to require the federal government to be balanced. Some of these asked for a convention only if Congress itself fails to balance the budget.

Here is a state-by-state list of how much federal money could be lost to the states if the balanced budget amendment becomes a reality:

USSR to China: 'get out of Vietnam'

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union said Sunday it will "honor its obligations under the treaty of friendship and cooperation" with Vietnam, which is under attack by Chinese forces.

The Soviets issued a final warning to Peking to stop their invasion of Vietnam "before it is too late," the Tass news agency said.

"The Soviet Union will honor its obligations under the treaty of friendship and cooperation between the U.S.S.R. and the Socialist Republic of Vietnam," Tass said.

"Those who decide policy in Peking should stop before it is too late."

The Soviet Union and Vietnam last November signed a 25-year treaty of friendship and cooperation, which pledges "mutual consultations" in the event of either country coming under attack by a third country.

The key article of the agreement reads:

"In the case one of the parties becomes the object of attack or of threats of attack, the high contracting parties will immediately begin mutual consultations for the purpose of removing that threat and taking appropriate effective measures to ensure the peace and security of their countries."

The two countries also promised to "vigorously counteract all the designs and machinations of imperialism and reactionary forces."

At the time the treaty was signed, Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev said in a thinly veiled reference to China:

"It is predictable that the treaty will be resented by those who do not like friendship between the Soviet Union and Vietnam, who place reliance on aggravating tensions, on dividing the socialist countries. But the treaty already has become a political reality and whether they want it or not, they will have to reckon with this reality."

Bolstered by the Kremlin's stern "hands off" warning to Peking, Vietnam's outnumbered forces counterattacked Sunday against China's invading armies but admitted Chinese troops were advancing on several provincial capitals.

U.S. "very tense" about China's Vietnam invasion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., describing the situation as "very tense," warned Sunday that China's invasion of Vietnam could lead to a war involving the United States and the Soviet Union.

"A great war could start from this if the Soviet Union came to the aid of Vietnam and we were compelled to decide what to do about the People's Republic (of China), which is unable to stand up in my judgment against the Soviet Union in a long war," Javits said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

But he said he does not believe such a war will break out because he doesn't think the Soviets are going to "leap into any conflict that can develop into a world conflict."

Both Javits, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., the No. 3 Republican in the House, urged the United Nations to take up the matter.

"We should call on the Chinese to withdraw and refer the matter to the United Nations," Anderson said in a statement.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said he believes the Chinese probably would withdraw from Vietnam if the Vietnamese withdrew from Cambodia.

"I believe the best way to treat this issue for the moment is to assume this is a limited, punishing drive by the Chinese against the Vietnamese in retaliation for the Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia," Baker said on ABC's "Issues and Answers."

New scroll deciphered

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — The last and most complete of the Dead Sea Scrolls has finally been published and discloses remarkable new evidence about the origin of Christian teaching on sex, marriage and divorce, a Biblical scholar said Sunday.

Called the "Temple Scroll" because a large part of it deals with reconstruction of the temple in Jerusalem, the newly published document sets forth a code of behavior forbidding divorce and polygamy.

It also supports celibacy by banning sex anywhere within the walls of Jerusalem.

The Temple Scroll was found in 1967 when Israel occupied Arab territory.

During the past 10 years it has been carefully unrolled and deciphered by Yagael Yadin, the Israeli scholar.

It is the longest scroll found, with 19 pages stretching 28 feet.

Prof. Jacob Milgrom of the University of California assisted Yadin in the work of restoration.

"In my opinion it is probably the most important scroll," Milgrom said in an interview with UPI. "To begin with, in this scroll, God speaks in the first person. This puts the scroll in a special category. You are dealing with revelation. His authorized word."

Milgrom said the Temple Scroll "throws new light on the origins of many Christian doctrines."

He cited the declaration in the scroll that anyone "aspiring to live within the shadow of the temple in a permanent state of holiness must be leading a single life." It forbids sexual relations anywhere in the entire city of Jerusalem.

In its extreme commands of purity surrounding the temple and sacrifices, the scroll also banned toilets throughout Jerusalem and even prohibits defecation on the Sabbath — anywhere.

The document also "forbids the king to take more than one wife and says he may not remarry as long as she is alive," Milgrom said. "The implications are obvious. Divorce is prohibited.

"We see for the first time that the views of marriage and divorce which were expressed in certain tendencies within the Gospels of the New Testament can be traced to teachings of this sect, which antedates the time of Jesus by at least a century and a half."

Milgrom noted that divorce and polygamy were not forbidden in the Old Testament.

The scrolls were found near the community of Qumran, occupied from about the middle of the second century B.C. to the time of the Roman invasion in 67 A.D., by a "fringe sect within Judaism" who had gone there to escape the "pollution" which its leaders felt had afflicted Jerusalem, according to the Berkeley scholar.

Idaho wildlife proposals made

By JEFF SHER
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Wildlife Federation wants the Central Idaho Wilderness Area to be at least 2.3 million acres.

And, the IWF would like to see the Idaho Department of Water Resources and the Environmental Division of the Department of Health and Welfare remain separate agencies, and the legislature to stay out of the Fish and Game Commission's business.

Those were three of the statements the IWF issued as its wound up its three day annual convention Sunday by adopting policy statements on issues it considers critical to wildlife.

Convention delegates decided the IWF should oppose the proposed merger of the Division of Environment of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare and the Department of Water Resources on the grounds that an agency which is primarily development oriented (DWR) should not have control of policing environmental quality.

The delegates also urged the legislature not to pass a proposed bill which would rescind special fishing regulations on the Henry's Fork of the Snake River. Delegates felt politics should play no role in the establishment of fishing and hunting regulations and legislative intervention to change a Fish and Game Commission decision would set a dangerous precedent.

Not stopping at the state level, delegates urged Congress to establish during the current session a River of No Return Wilderness Area of at least 2.3 million acres and to designate 237 miles of the main Salmon River as a wild and scenic river.

Delegates also voted to:

•Request the complete reevaluation of the timber harvest program planned for the South Hills by the Sawtooth National Forest. (Sawtooth Forest officials announced Saturday that such a review will be undertaken.)

•Request that the entire Idaho share of Agricultural Conservation Program funds for soil conservation be used to implement best management practices for reducing irrigation return-flow pollution rather than to purchase convenient capital investments for farmers such as gated pipe and concrete ditches.

•Oppose proposed reductions in the present standard for allowable dissolved oxygen levels in Idaho waters.

•Oppose the modification of the Clearwater Memorial Bridge at Lewiston to allow for barge traffic.

•Urges the Environmental Protection Agency, the Idaho Fish and Game Department and other federal and state agencies to audit the management plans for several units on the Nez Perce National Forest to determine whether roads in the area are being constructed with best management practices.

•Request the National Wildlife Federation to develop educational programs designed to instruct young people in the benefits derived from hunting.

•Initiate a referendum to insure that the Idaho Fish and Game Department receives the interest generated from dedicated funds of the department.

•Urge the Idaho legislature to outlaw the sale of bighorn sheep horns but to provide for the lawful transfer of such horns as heirlooms.

•Urge the legislature to require that before purchasing a hunting license a person must present a valid hunting license from Idaho or another state or proof that he has passed an NRA approved hunter safety course or an approved hunting qualification exam.

•Urge that clear and detailed regulations be issued to instruct federal agencies in complying with the Fish and Wildlife Coordination Act of 1958 to conserve fish and wildlife resources.

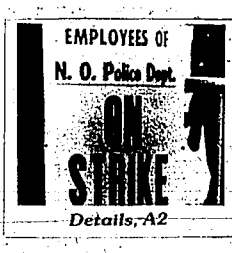

•Support the proposed transfer of the Forest Service from the Department of Agriculture to the proposed Department of Natural Resources.

•Request that truck traffic be rerouted from U.S. Highway 12 (along the Lochsa River) to U.S. Highway 90 (through Superior, Mont.), to protect wintering big game animals and water quality in the Lochsa River.

•Urge that complete, modern and sophisticated oil spill cleanup facilities be made ready and available in the lower Columbia River, to be paid for in part by oil companies, due to an expected increase in oil tanker traffic on the river.

•Pledge its resources to seek establishment of instream flows on the Columbia River to protect salmon-steelhead resources.

The delegates also elected new officers for the coming year. William R. Meiners of Boise was elected president. Fred Page, Jr., of Hope was chosen vice-president, and Dr. William Platts of Boise was selected secretary-treasurer.

President Carter comforts wife of slain U.S. ambassador

Afghan ambassador buried, Carter consoles wife

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter condemned the murder of U.S. Ambassador Adolph Dubs Sunday as a "despicable act of violence" and then comforted a weeping Mary Ann Dubs with a gentle kiss and words of praise for her husband.

Dubs was "a good man, a courageous man" who died honorably serving his country in Afghanistan, Carter said after the landing of the presidential jet that carried the slain diplomat's body home.

Carter looked solemn throughout the bitterly cold ceremony at Andrews Air Force Base that honored Dubs, who was killed last week when Afghan police, aided by Soviet advisers, stormed the hotel room in Kabul where four kidnappers held him captive.

The president said the United States was outraged at "the senseless terrorism" in which Dubs died.

"We condemn those who perpetrated and who participated in such a despicable act of violence," he said.

The United States has accused the Soviet Union of playing a role in Dub's slaying and while the Kremlin has denied any responsibility, the State Department said it was shocked over the role played by Soviet advisers.

Carter made no direct mention of the Soviet Union in his speech.

The president, hatless in the subfreezing wind, hugged Mrs. Dubs as she broke into tears at the end of the ceremony and kissed her gently on the temple.

Mrs. Dubs also cried after Secretary of State Cyrus Vance presented her with the Secretary's Award — the highest honor the State Department can bestow — on behalf of her husband.

New satellite launched

WALLOPS ISLAND, Va. (UPI) — Amidst a snow storm and subfreezing temperatures, the space agency launched a satellite Sunday to monitor the stratospheric layer of ozone that scientists fear is being eroded by spray can gases and other pollutants.

Project scientists said several years of observation by the little spacecraft, and another to be launched with a similar instrument in 1983, should tell if the 8 to 30 mile high ozone layer is being depleted.

Ozone protects the Earth from harmful amounts of ultraviolet radiation from the sun.

The new satellite, called SAGE for stratospheric aerosol and gas experiment, was built by the Boeing Aerospace Co., of Seattle. The $13 million project is managed by NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center, Greenbelt, Md.

Iran breaks with Israel

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Iran's new revolutionary government broke diplomatic relations with Israel Sunday in a move timed to coincide with the arrival in Tehran of Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat.

"Today Iran, tomorrow Palestine," Arafat said. He predicted Iran would shut off all oil supplies to Israel.

Premier Mehdi Bazargan was reported by Iran radio to have described the break in relations as being "fully in keeping with the policy announced before we came to power of cutting all ties with Israel."

The government said the 22 Israeli diplomats in Iran had been ordered to leave the country and had already done so, and that Iranian diplomats in Israel had been recalled.

More men in uniform

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite their failure to meet recruiting goals, the armed services ended 1978 with more people in uniform than they wanted, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., said Sunday.

The Wisconsin Democrat cited an announcement by the Defense Department that all four services failed to meet recruiting goals in the final quarter of last year.

"But recruiting is only one side of the coin," Aspin said. "The number of men in uniform is determined by how many come in and by how many go out."

Because fewer than expected left the armed forces, he said, the services ended up with 2,000 more in uniform than they had budgeted for.

At the end of the year active military strength was 2,041,000 million, rather than 2,039,000 as planned.

Big S & Ls named

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Los Angeles savings and loan association was the country's largest thrift institution in 1978 for the 24th consecutive year, the U.S. League of Savings Associations said Sunday.

Home Savings of Los Angeles reported record assets of $10.6 billion at the end of 1978.

Great Western Savings of Beverly Hills was second, with $8.5 billion in assets; followed by American Savings, with $5.3 billion in assets.

Eleven of the 15 largest associations are in California, league officials said.

Other top associations are First Federal of Detroit, $2.9 billion; First Federal of Chicago, $2.7 billion; Standard Federal of Troy (a Detroit suburb), $2.5 billion; and Gibraltar Savings of Houston, $2.4 billion.

Sixty-seven associations had assets of more than $1 billion during 1978, up from 49 associations in 1977. An additional 175 associations had assets of more than $500 million, up from 144 the year before, according to the league.

USSR warns China

Reports from both sides of the battlefront in the two Communist nations' border war indicated Sunday night that Vietnam's defense forces had staged effective attacks and briefly slowed the Chinese.

But later broadcasts from Hanoi, monitored early Monday in Hong Kong, said "provincial capitals are threatened." The Vietnamese-language reports did not specify which cities, but Indochina observers said it was likely the capitals of Cao Lang and Hoang Lien Son provinces were under attack.

Radio Hanoi claimed Vietnam's defense forces have "put out of action" more than 1,000 enemy soldiers and 60 tanks since the Chinese attacked Saturday with warplanes, tanks and artillery.

But diplomatic sources with access to reports from Hanoi said the Chinese, who vastly outnumber the Vietnamese, had already overrun two major towns and a string of villages along the 450-mile border.

Intelligence sources said Hanoi has moved to strengthen defenses in its four northern provinces under attack by moving two squadrons of Soviet-made MIG-21 jet fighters closer to the invasion front.

U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim said continued fighting in Indochina would bring the world "unforeseeable consequences," but there was no sign that his appeal or any other had any effect on China and Vietnam, neighbors whose history of hostility stretches back more than 21 centuries.

The official New China News Agency broke its silence on details of the fighting early Monday with a report from battlefronts in Kwangsi and Yunnan provinces.

Most of Vietnam's army — 19 divisions — is tied down with fighting in Cambodia, where Khmer Rouge attacks are continuing six weeks after the fall of Phnom Penh. Vietnam's chief military strategist, Gen. Van Tien Dung, and Prime Minister Pham Van Dong were in Cambodia when the Chinese attacked and they had not yet returned Sunday.

Peking, which has promised not to occupy any Vietnamese territory permanently, said its invasion was a retaliatory move for hundreds of Vietnamese border strikes which "wounded or killed more than 300 Chinese frontier guards and civilians," China's official news agency reported.

NCNA said Chinese troops crossed the border after being "driven beyond forbearance." The agency described the Vietnamese as "nationalist expansionists" trying to "dominate Southeast Asia."

New Orleans police will talk

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Federal mediators announced Sunday night city officials and police union leaders have agreed to their first face-to-face bargaining session since the start of the police strike that threatens Mardi Gras.

The announcement came hours after a firemen's union leader urged off-duty firemen to join striking police on picket lines, threatening to expand the 2-day-old walkout.

Federal Mediator Ansel Garrett, his voice cracking with fatigue, said Sunday evening both sides agreed to return to bargaining at 3 p.m. Monday at the Louisiana Superdome.

"We requested and the parties responded to a meeting for 3 p.m. (Monday) in an effort to resolve the current work stoppage between the Police Association of New Orleans and the city of New Orleans," he said.

"We asked both parties to come on, let's really work at it."

Garrett also said both parties asked him to be the official spokesman on progress of the talks to eliminate contradictory stories from feuding sides.

The re-establishment of talks came hours after a police solidarity rally during which firemen's union president Clarence Perez urged his members to join picket lines on their off time.

He had been predicting a wildcat walkout by sympathetic firemen.

National Guardsmen armed with M-16s patrolled high-crime areas of the city in jeeps and stood watch at all city facilities. The guardsmen joined state troopers who were brought in from throughout the state.

Carnival activities will increase this week and are expected to culminate on Shrove Tuesday — Feb. 27 — with day-long parades and more than a million people crowding downtown. But New Orleans mayor Morial said he will cancel all Mardi Gras celebrations in the city for the first time since the Korean War if the police remain out.

Already, several parades have been canceled and others moved to the suburbs. Even if Mardi Gras is called off in the city, about 20 parades are scheduled in the suburbs.

"I don't think any good purpose is served by assuming, for instance, that the Russians are going to come across the Sino-Soviet border or that it will escalate into a major war between those two countries," he said.

Baker and Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, both said the United States should continue quietly observing the situation and exercising restraint.

Glenn, chairman of the Foreign Relation Committee's Asian and Pacific affairs subcommittee, said the United States should use its "good offices" to try to mediate the conflict and to advise those involved to exercise as much restraint as possible.

"The big question now is how long they (the Chinese) stay in that area (of Vietnam) because if they stay in that area very long, the Soviet Union has to honor its friendship treaty that they have just signed with Vietnam," Glenn said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Congress queries CIA, FBI reform

(Editors note: Rep. Morgan F. Murphy (D-Ill.) is a member of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence)

By MORGAN F. MURPHY
©1979 Chicago Sun-Times

The New Congress will be grappling with major proposals to reform U.S. intelligence agencies. The push for such legislation is an outgrowth of disclosures that the FBI and CIA have violated the privacy of American citizens with wiretaps, mail openings and surreptitious entries.

The bills deal with a number of issues that have surfaced since certain intelligence "horror stories" first came to light in 1974. Those issues include:

• What activities, if any, should be prohibited in the conduct of covert operations abroad?

An executive order issued a year ago by President Carter places restrictions on those operations. A bill sponsored by Sen. Walter Huddleston (D-Ky.) would prohibit assassinations of foreign officials, the torturing of individuals and the use of chemical or biological weapons that violate U.S. treaties.

A House proposal, first introduced by former Rep. Herman Badillo (D-N.Y.), would forbid all covert operations except in time of war.

• Should intelligence agencies be allowed to use clergy, journalists and academics in espionage and covert activities?

Carter's executive order leaves this matter to the intelligence chiefs. The Senate bill would permit such individuals to, volunteer their cooperation; last year's House proposal, by forbidding covert operations in peacetime, would prohibit these arrangements altogether.

• Should surreptitious entries — ones for which no warrant has been obtained — be authorized for intelligence purposes?

President Carter's order allows such entries within and outside the United States; Huddleston's bill also permits them. The House bill would permit physical searches only under a criminal warrant procedure.

These are the kinds of questions that the Senate and House intelligence committees will be looking into as they examine various proposals and draft legislation overseeing the activities of our intelligence agencies.

Shortly before it adjourned last October, the 95th Congess took a major step forward in curbing intelligence abuses when it passed a bill requiring search warrants for most national security wiretaps. Until this legislation was signed into law, Presidents were able to order electronic surveillance without a warrant in "national security" cases. The new law requires the government to get a search warrant so that Americans are protected from unreasonable searches and seizures, as guaranteed under the Fourth Amendment.

The bill had the support of the Carter administration, the American Bar Assn., the American Civil Liberties Union and the intelligence agencies themselves, which argued that a new law would protect their agents from civil suits and other repercussions.

Recently, FBI director William H. Webster announced that he plans to fire two supervisors, demote another and suspend a fourth for carrying out illegal surveillance during a search for radical fugitives in the early 1970s.

As passed by Congress, the bill requires the government to obtain a search warrant before wiretapping American citizens suspected of paying in the United States for foreign governments.

In those situations, the government must get a warrant based on standards similar to those in ordinary criminal cases. When wiretapes are aimed at employees or agents of foreign countries, the standards are less strict. No warrant is required for monitoring communications exclusively between foreign powers, such as an embassy and its home country. The attorney general, however, would have to certify that there is little or no likelihoood that the conversations of Americans would be picked up.

To ensure that intelligence agencies are not prevented from acting effectively when the need arises, the bill allows "emergency surveillances" for a 24-hour period, after which a warrant must be obtained.

In my view, the wiretape control bill will protect U.S. citizens from unwarranted invasions of their privacy without hampering the ability of our intelligence agencies to safe-guard the national security. Moreover, it will protect FBI and CIA agents from being sued for conducting surveillance that might later be judged illegal. the upshot of this is the intelligence gathering will actually improve, as agents now can carry out monitoring activities without fear of legal or administrative consequences.

Passage of the wiretap bill suggests that Congress can strike a prudent balance between intelligence gathering and protecting civil liberties. In that spirit, Congress should proceed to write legislative charters for the CIA and FBI to assure that abuses of these agencies never occur again.

Legislature wrong on big fish

Big bad, big fish contests will continue in Idaho.

The state legislature has seen to that by tabling a bill abolishing big fish contests in the state.

The legislature, it seems, again has confused sportsmanship with bounty-hunting.

Now, in what is being called a compromise on the issue banning big fish contests, the legislature is considering a bill to limit the amount of money that can be awarded to winners of big fish contests.

That's not a compromise. Setting a monetary limit on big fish contests misses the entire unsavory point of these contests.

Catching big fish for money is nothing but a slimy kind of bounty-hunting no matter what the prize.

True-blue sportsmen cannot and will not put a dollar value on wildlife. To them, trophy trout in a stream or sheep on a mountaintop are priceless assets.

To bounty hunter, the big fish contestant, wildlife is nothing more than a vehicle for winning a few bucks, a game of poker played with poles and bait.

The winner of big fish contests are rarely the best fishermen, just the luckiest.

Sportsmen see big fish derbies for what they are: crass attempts by their sponsors to make a quick dollar off wildlife.

And what of the argument that big fish contests attract out-of-state tourist dollars?

Anyone who has fished the Henry's Fork for trout or the Salmon or Clearwater rivers for steelhead, or the north Idaho lakes for kamloops, knows out-of-state sporstmen come to Idaho without big fish contests.

They come to fish streams still relatively clean and full of good-sized trout.

Many of these fisherman throw back the big ones for others to enjoy.

Sure, big contests attraot a few more people, particularly people who like the idea of fishing for money but don't often think of fishing for the fun of it.

Does the state need to encourage this kind of fisherman?

Apparently the legislature thinks it does.

Washington—what next?

Taliaferro Spelvin, the Rappahannock County couuntryman, telephoned the other day to say that he had discovered the one eternal question by which life is lived in Washington, D.C. It is not, as Adlai Stevenson once believed, "How long, O Lord, how long?"

No, said my friend. The ternal question is, "What next?"

J.T., as he is widely known, had gone into Washington in the hope of exchanging a few words with his secret inamorata, Lauren Bacall. She was autographing her book at a bookstore near the White House, but the line of customers was so long that J.T. gave up. He dusted the snow off a bench in Lafayette Park and sat down to contemplate the news.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission, he noted, is seeking comments on its new standard for walk-behind power mowers. The standard would add significantly to the weight, breadth and clumsiness of such mowers. At a time when the government's policy is to hold down price increases on consumer products, the standard would add $35 to the price tag of a typical lawnmower.

An item from the Department of Labor caught his eye. A grant of $140,000 had been awarded to a group of bold entrepreneurs in California to make a census of the Samoan population in Orange County. The study was four months overdue and the chief entrepreneur had vanished, reportedly to his former home in Samoa. What next? Spelvin inquired of the pigeons in the park. What next?

The National Science Foundation, he learned, has earmarked $45,000 in tax funds for a study of the noises made by ground squirrels in distress. Another grant will provide $2,360 in tax funds for a study of the sex life of Costa Rican crickets. "Aaargh!" cried Spelvin, making the noises of a taxpayer in distress.

My friend was briefly comforted by a report that computers in the Office of Education had rejected 876,000 of the 3.5 million applications received last fall for Basic Educational Opportunity Grants. The problem, it appeared, was that the application forms were so infernally complicated that a fourth of the high-school graduates couldnot follow the seven pages of instructions.

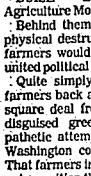

"The government is awfully uptight about television," J.T. reported. "There was that $220,000 grant to teach college students how to watch Howard Cosell. The Federal Trade Commission is up to its ears in its assault uopn commercials aimed at children. The Federal Communications Commission is praying over a nationwide program to teach consumers how to turn their TV sets off and on. The Commission on Civil Rights has just released a report denouncing a trend toward 'jiggly' portrayals of women in prime-time programs."

Spelvin said he tried to learn what the Federal Trade Commission is up to, but he abandoned the effort. The FTC is up to everything. The FTC is chasing madly after vocational schools, hearing aids, funeral directors, used cars, doctors in general, plastic surgeons in particular and the manufacturers of Formica. The FTC is planning training seminars in six cities, at which 50 consumer activists at a time will be trained in how to get paid for testifying in FTC proceedings.

"I get a dizzy feeling every time I go to Washington," J.T. complained. "I read about some dang fool waste of my money, and I say to myself: That's it. That is the absolute utmost, the apex, the Mt. Everest of lunacy. Then I turn the page and I find something sillier."

It's not only the executive agencies that keep his adrenals pumping. Spelvin said he was about to abandon his park bench in the hope that he might yet approach Ms. Bacall when one more item caught his eye. Up in the Senate, he perceived, the beleaguered Republic of China had found two new and influential friends. Who was whooping it up for the security and prosperity of Taiwan? Senators Frank Church and Edward Kennedy! In a strangled voice, he once more inquired aloud, "What next?" Then he came home.

Farmers lost with demonstrations in Washington

BOISE — Last week the farmers of the American Agriculture Movement began leaving Washington.

Behind them they left not only millions of dollars in physical destruction but the wreckage of a dream: that farmers would ever organize and work effectively as a united political force.

Quite simply the idiot tactics of the AAM have set farmers back at least 10 years in their drive to receive a square deal from the federal government. Their thinly disguised greed, their wanton destruction and their pathetic attempts at lobbying have left most of official Washington convinced all farmers are ignorant boobs. That farmers in many cases have legitimate complaints is not a position that will be easily accepted in the capitol for some years.

The none too subtle carousing by some of the farmers in the capitol, including public drunkenness and trips to the city's red light district, have left Western senators and congressmen scrambling to explain that "these farmers" weren't representative of the farmers in "their district."

I was in Washington during the beginning of the farmer's demonstrations, and spent the better part of a day talking with farmers, police and the city residents who've seen it all before.

I couldn't find any Idaho farmrers in the demonstrations, but at this point, that really doesn't matter. As an agricultural state, Idaho will be tarred by the AAM excesses whether or not it contributed any persons to the demonstrations.

The physical destruction was terrible. Hundreds of massive tractors criss-crossed the mall, spinning wheelies, smashing ticket booths, ripping up what is one of the most beautiful public treasures in America. Police estimate more than $2 million in property damage was done by the farmers — largely through abuse of the land by farm machinery.

It may be two years before the land is re-seeded and restored to its original splendor. If you're going to Washington this summer and expect to see that beautiful grassy lawn stretching from the capitol to the Washington Monument, forget it. What you'll see is muddy ruts.

Washington police say more damage has been done to the mall than was ever done by any demonstration before. The civil rights marches, the anti-war protesters, Resurrection City, all damaged the mall but none as much as did this handful of sleazy hicks from the sticks who ruined fragile and beautiful landscaping with their massive tractors.

Then there was the traffic snarl. On the first day they arrived in Washington, AAM farmers drove their tractors into intersections and blocked cars and buses. Traffic in this city is at best a nightmare. AAM farmers merely multiplied the chaos. That, too, won't be forgotten by the thousands of commuters — many of them senators and representatives — trying to get home.

Finally there were the outrageous demands of the AAM. With straight faces they demanded as a right 100 percent parity, and denied this was a guaranteed annual income. Anyone who suggested that complete government financing of agriculture might also result in complete government regulation of farming, was hooted down.

As an Idahoan, I'm the first to agree farmers aren't getting much of a break from the government. In many cases in Idaho and other western states, profits are low or nonexistent. But solution to those problems won't come from unorganized spree's like the AAM has just sponsored. Those tractors should have been replaced with hundreds of farmers quietly walking the halls of congress, patiently advocating specific legislation. The destruction of property should have been replaced with a hard-nosed, well-financed lobbying effort.

Just to pick one example, strong support for a new sugar bill, such as has been advocated by members of Idaho's congressional delegation, would have produced a hundred times the benefit to agriculture that the recent demonstrations have produced.

Unfortunately, it will now be some time before farmers are well received on capitol hill. AAM has left the entire agriculture movement with little currency to spend in congress.

If Idaho farmers wish to disassociate themselves from the AAM, and they should, then one course of action might be a good start. A delegation of Idaho farmers should donate the grass seed, flowers, shrubbery, time and effort to rebuild the mall. They should make it publicly known they did not sympathize with the kooks who came close to completely destroying one of America's most beautiful treasures.

It may be too much to ask, but it would be delightful if just once there was a debate about Amtrak based on fact rather than emotion.

Last week the Idaho Senate went through a breast-beating pious denunciation of the Pioneer line that goes through Idaho. It should be eliminated, Amtrak opponents said, because it was losing money and was receiving federal subsidies.

The line should be eliminated, Amtrak opponents said, because it wasn't making a profit and it received a government subsidy.

This is news?

As is almost always the case in Amtrak debates, the good senators were comparing apples and oranges.

Point number one. Amtrak lines, including this one are running in the red. True. I wouldn't deny it for a moment. What the Idaho Senate didn't stop to consider was that with a few exceptions, rail passenger service has always been a losing proposition. In most railroads profit has not come from passengers but from freight shipments — and enormous government land grants.

During the mid and late 1800s, railroads expanding in the west usually received between 10 and 40 sections of free land for each mile of track constructed. A section is one square mile of land.

That land, plus charges for freight, kept railroads in profit. The attitude of many early railroaders to passenger service was best summed up by James J. Hill, the president of the Great Northern Railroad. "A passenger train," Hill said, "is like the male teat, neither useful nor ornamental."

So the senators were correct in saying the Pioneer line doesn't pay its way. That's half the story and a very important half. It should not be overlooked. But serious questions can also be raised as to whether the airlines or the bus services pay their way. A survey taken a few years back showed that in the previous 55 years government (federal, state and local) has provided $457 billion for construction and maintenance of the nation's streets, highways and airports. Roughly $300 billion of this was covered by highway and other user taxes and toll revenues, while most of the rest came from general fund revenues.

While the airline and busing industries paid their share of the taxes (as do railroads), a large chunk of the funds came from taxpayers. That's as much a subsidy to the buses and planes as the senators now claim Amtrak receives.

Then there's the expense of the interstate highway system. If that network had been built to withstand only the weights and stresses of private automobiles, and not the significantly heavier weights of buses and trucks, the cost of the system would be reduced by more than one-half. Again a subsidy.

The senators also failed to point out the unique advantages of a rail mass transportation system, advantages particularly valuable during an energy crisis the president has said is the "moral equivalent of war."

The fuel mileage of an average American train is just over one-third of a gallon per passenger for each 100 miles. That mileage ratio is 12 times that of an automobile, 15 times that of an airplane and twice that of most buses.

A single set of railroad tracks can carry more than 40,000 persons an hour. A six-lane highway can carry only 9,000 persons an hour and a single lane-highway tops out at just over 2,000 persons an hour.

Traveling by rail is 1 ½ times as safe as by bus, 2 ½ times as safe as by plane and 23 times as safe as by private automobile.

What is important to remember is not that rail transportation has certain advantages over cars, planes or buses, or that each of those forms of transortation have their own advantages. What is important is that all are needed if the nation is to have a balanced transportation system which can adequately deal with the many and diverse problems of passenger service. No one part of the system should be cannibalized for the sake of other parts.

And no one form of transportation should be solely credited with sins common to all.

Hubcaps make good business

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — If anything could be expected to draw the disapproval of everyone it is potholes, but Russell Santmyers of Wexford, a northern suburb, loves the little ruts.

Santmyers deals in used hubcaps — there are thousand hanging from the rafters of his small Route 19 shop, and a hefty snow-covered heap of them out front — and potholes mean customers.

He has been selling used auto parts for 28 years, but deals in hubcaps almost exclusively these days.

"Two years ago the hubcap business picked up, and as it kept growing, things got to where I concentrate most of my time on it," he said. "When this weather breaks, you watch what happens."

What usually happens is an onslaught of grumbling motorists seeking replacements for wheel covers lost inside an asphalt crater. "I hear more people complain that they're probably buying back their own hubcap," Santmyers said.

They may be.

Some of the hubcaps on stock — Santmyers says he has $11,000 in the store currently — are collected right out front of the store where potholes are common.

Others are brought in by police, news carriers, truckers or people willing to trade caps they've gathered in exchange for ones to fit their own car.

In fact, anyone who works along highways is in a position to collect and sell Santmyers the hubcaps they find lying on the road shoulder.

One of Santmyers' chief suppliers, an irony he acknowledges, are the road crew employees of the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation.

"My business wouldn't be what it is without PennDOT," Santmyers grins.

U.S. infants contract "dark disease," too

By ARTHUR J. SNIDER
Chicago Sun-Times

CHICAGO — The "dark disease" afflicting babies in Italy is occuring throughout the United States now but deaths are infrequent, says a University of Chicago pediatrician who first demonstrated the widespread nature of the respiratory ailment.

"Almost all large cities have an outbreak almost every winter, often in epidemic form," declared Dr. Marc O. Beem, a pediatric virologist.

The chief symptom is a swelling of the bronchial passages so that the child has great difficulty in breathing. The responsible agent is known as syncytial virus. It returns year after year, mostly in January, and reaches a peak in February and March.

In Naples, where at least 61 babies have died of the disease in the last year, authorities are desenfecting the city of 2.8 million people with the aid of Military personnel.

Italians are calling it 'dark disease," presumably because lack of oxygen is causing the babies' faces to turn blue.

"The symptoms frequently start with what looks like a cold,' Beem explained. "Breathing trouble then occurs often with wheezing. If the airways are very tight, the baby can hardly move any air, they have so much trouble breathing they cannot maintain normal nutrition and hydration.

"In our experience, the small number of deaths usually occur in those infants who have something else wrong, such as congenital heart disease or an underlying lung abnormality.

"Not yet understood is why some communities seem to have more virulent outbreaks than others. It appears to be more frequent among lower socioeconomic groups and areas of poor housing."

FBI received tip that Oswald would be shot

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — An FBI agent who investigated Lee Harvey Oswald prior to President Kennedy's assasination said the FBI received an anonymous call Nov. 24, 1963, informing them Oswald would be killed that afternoon while being transferred from the city jail to the county jail.

In a copyright article appearing in the Sunday editions of the Kansas City Star, James Hosty Jr., who retired from the FBI last month, said the FBI was opposed to moving Oswald. However, Hosty said, the Dallas police department had jurisdiction and would not change its plans. Oswald was shot and killed during the transfer.

"We, of course, didn't know whether the call was legitimate or from some crank," Hosty said. "But when the police insisted on going ahead with the move. We (FBI agents) were ordered to stay completely out of the area. We wanted no part of it, under the circumstances."

The Star said Hosty made his comments in the first interview he has granted on his investigation of Oswald. Hosty has testified about the Kennedy assasination and Oswald before the Warren Commission, a House-Judiciary subcommittee and a Senate Intelligence subcomittee.

Former FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and the Warren Commission criticized Hosty for his investigation of Oswald. He was suspended for a month without pay and transferred from Dallas to Kansas City. However, the House Select Committee on Assasinations, in a preliminary report released last month, said Hosty's investigation of Oswald was "properly conducted."

Hosty, who now lives in the Kansas City suburb of Westwood, Kan., had refused comment, outside that to the Warren Commission and congressional committees, on a note from Oswald that was left for him at the Dallas FBI office prior to the assassination.

Hosty told the Star the note was left several weeks before the Kennedy assasination and he said it was destroyed hours after Oswald was shot to death.

Hosty was assigned to make a routine investigation in March 1963 because Oswald's wife, Marina, was a native of Russia. He reopened a previous file on Oswald during the investigation. He interviewed Mrs. Oswald on Nov. 1, 1963. Hosty said between Nov. 5 and 8, Oswald walked into his office and gave a receptionist a note for him.

"When I came in she handed me the note without comment," Hosty said. "It was in an envelope but I don't remember if it was sealed."

The receptionist testified the note said, "I will blow up the FBI and the Dallas Police Department if you don't stop bothering my wife."

Hosty denied the note contained any threat.

"The note didn't contain any threats to me or to the FBI office," he said. "It wasn't particularly unusual to get notes like that during an investigation, and I really didn't attach much significance to it."

Travolta tours Texas bar

PASADENA, Texas (UPI) — Actor and teen idol John Travolta soaked up some local culture at Mickey Gilley's honky tonk Saturday night, where he practiced a few Western dance steps but avoided an offer to ride a mechanical bull.

Travolta is considering accepting the lead role in the movie "Urban Cowboy," which is to begin filming at Gilley's and other south Texas locations in April.

Accompanied by bodyguards, Travolta toured the club Saturday afternoon and signed autographs for employees' children, but he declined when offered a ride on the mechanical bull, a barrel-like contraption that bucks like a rodeo bull.

"Hey, John, when are you gonna ride that thing?" asked a young patron. "Get on up there."

"Naw, not yet," the star of "Saturday Night Live" and "Grease" replied.

"I'll ride it eventually, but not today. I need to take one home with me and practice on it in my backyard."

Arson suspected in Indiana fire

Chicago Sun-Times

WHITING, Ind. — Officials of Amoco Oil Co. have confirmed that sabotage is considered a possible cause of a fire that destroyed two tanks containing 25,000 gallons of diesel oil at its refinery here.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms have joined in the investigation. The blaze a week ago drove 2,000 people from their homes and nearly halted refinery operations.

Meanwhile, Amoco, a subsidiary of Standard Oil of Indiana, acknowledged that the giant Whiting refinery, its second largest, has recorded a "higher than average" number of fires since the first of the year.

But arson is not suspected in those fires, said Gerry Kamprath, an Amoco spokesman.

Amoco officials earlier determined that last weeks blaze began in a "pipe alley" alongside the 40,000- and 20,000-barrel tanks. But on Friday, they said they still did not know the source of ignition.

Virgos' keen desire to change routine requires some tact

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Be determined not to tread on anyone else's feet but to consider their position in any joint interest. Let them be aware that you want to be cooperative and act in true harmony.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Cooperation is the keynote today, whether it be with debtors, creditors, kin, friends, or partners. Do a special favor for others and gain their goodwill.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) If you listen to the views of associates more you can have greater accord now. Situations arise that test your capability at handling them wisely.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Ideal time to tackle the work ahead of you and make a dent into it. Show you are efficient. More cooperation shown to co-workers is wise.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be more concerned with important matters. If you must have a good time, don't try to force the issue. Go along with the tide during spare hours.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Show more affection for those at home and have greater harmony there. Don't have any contrary confrontations with others. Avoid one who is very temperamental.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You want to improve routines but use tact with others in order to do so effectively. Meet on common ground and you can build nicely.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Look about for a new outlet that will give you an added income quickly. Take no chances with fly-by-nights, though. Show you are reliable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Take time to analyze your position accurately so that you will know how to proceed in the future. Wait until later in the day to socialize.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) There is a situation that keeps recurring to mar your independence which needs to be cleared up. Keep promises and don't be ostentatious. Avoid the social in the evening and be safe.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Try to understand the needs of your friends instead of expecting so much from them and you get along better. Don't hold on to that so-called friend who has done you harm in the past.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Contact influential persons you know and talk over how to be mutually helpful. Be more cooperative with others and solve problems well. Avoid a tendency to overspend.

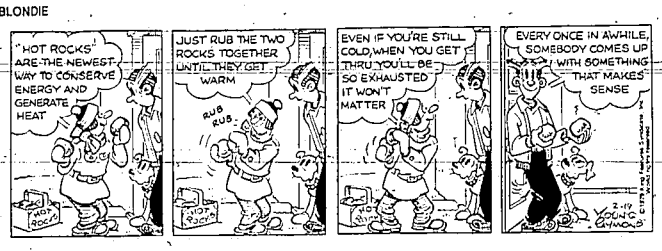

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Put new ideas to work that activate you and make them work like a charm. Your hunches are good for bettering your whole existence, so follow them. Be discriminating for best results.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will learn early how to make a plan and follow it in order to gain what is most desired no matter how long it takes. Teach early to understand the desires of others and to cooperate with them.

What's what

Idaho is the only state in the U.S. that had its capital kidnapped

Territorial capital of Idaho in the 1860s was the northern town of Lewiston. But lawmakers in the southern part of the state didn't much like that. So a bunch of them gathered up the records and seal and rode off with them to Boise. And there they remained. Insofar as I know, no other state capital was so kidnapped.

Am now advised. It was a New York bartender affectionately known as Professor Jerry Thomas who first concocted that mixed drink called the Tom and Jerry. And its name purportedly came from his.

It was regarded as indecent 100 years ago for a lady to sit with her feet off the floor in any place except her bedroom.

EINSTEIN'S BRAIN

Q. "Where's Albert Einstein's brain?"

A. In a plain Mason jar. In a cardboard box. In the corner of a little laboratory. In Wichita, Kans. Before he died in 1955, Einstein noted that his brain was his laboratory and asked Princeton Chief Pathologist Dr. Thomas Harvey to study it posthumously. Dr. Harvey did that, taking it to his Kansas place.

Q. "Farmers used to refer to pieces of their acreage as 'the south 40' or 'the north 40' or whatever, but always as '40.' Why?"

A. The U. S. Government in 1785 put out a plan to divide the westerly lands into square-mile tracts. These most usually were cut into 40-acre plots. They turned into something of a standard pasture size.

NEEDED WORD

Our Language man says the Scandinavians have a word that we ought to borrow forthwith. It's "svaha." Means the time lapse between the lightning bolt and the thunder clap. What a useful set of syllables! Between the first hello and the goodnight kiss, comes the svaha. Between the proposal and the wedding ceremony, the svaha. Between the newborn babe and the orthodontist, svaha.

A footnote to the history of Ireland records an odd quirk about that renowned Irish nationalist leader of a century ago, Charles Parnell. He had a compulsive aversion to the color green.

Larry Layton on trial for Guyana massacre

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (UPI) — His bullets may not have hit anyone, but Larry Layton goes on trial for his life Monday on multiple charges of murder arising from the airstrip massacre that killed a U.S. congressman and triggered the Peoples Temple mass suicides.

A murder conviction is punishable by the death penalty — hanging — in Guyana.

The prosecution alleges that Layton, a 32-year-old ex-Marine from San Francisco, posed as a false defector last Nov. 18 when Rep. Leo Ryan visited the Jonestown religious commune to determine if any of the Peoples Temple cultists were being held against their will.

As the 53-year-old California Democrat and his party were leaving with a total of 17 defectors, fanatical followers of the late Rev. Jim Jones ambushed the group clustered around two chartered airplanes at the Port Kaituma airstrip near the jungle commune, 150 miles northwest of Georgetown. It is alleged that Layton also started firing from within the group.

Since an investigation concluded that the eight young men who did most of the damage all died at Jonestown later the same night in the mass murder-suicide ritual that killed 913 cultists, Layton was the only one who could be charged for the murders.

At the conclusion of the preliminary hearing that indicted Layton on a series of murder and attempted murder charges, a magistrate said the defendant may not have pulled the trigger, but "I find from his actions before and during the shooting that he was acting in concert with others who caused the death of Leo Ryan."

Despite reports Saturday night that a "plea bargain" had been arranged in which Layton would plead guilty to the lesser charges of attempted murder, chief defense attorney Rex McKay Sunday denied any agreement had been reached. His comments indicated, however, that a guilty plea was possible when the trial begins.

In the only other Peoples Temple criminal case still pending, the cult's illiterate shoemaker, Charles E. "Chuck" Beikman, of Indianapolis, faces four murder charges and one of attempted murder in the butcher knife killings of a family of four in the Guyanese capital the night of the mass suicides.

No trial date has yet been set for Beikman.

Layton is specifically charged with five counts of murder and three of attempted murder. He is alleged to be responsible for the deaths of Ryan, the globe-trotting San Francisco congressman; NBC newsman Don Harris, 42, and cameraman Robert Brown, 36, both of Los Angeles; San Francisco Examiner photographer Greg Robinson, 27; and cult defector Patricia Parks, 44.

Attempted murder charges were filed against him in the wounding of three other defectors: Mrs. Parks's son Dale, 27, of Ukiah, Calif.; Monica Bagley, 18, of San Francisco; and Vern Gosney, 23, also of San Francisco, who spent several weeks in the hospital at the Roosevelt Roads Naval Base in Puerto Rico undergoing treatment for a bullet-ruptured spleen.

Conviction on any of the murder charges will bring the mandatory death sentence by hanging for Layton.

A central issue at the two-week trial is expected to be the admissibility of a statement Layton gave police after the shooting, saying he "begged Jim Jones that I be allowed to bring down the plane and I went to the airport intending to bring down the plane. When the shooting started, I also started shooting."

Egypt brings no new concessions

By United Press International

Egypt's chief negotiator, Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil, will not be carrying any new concessions when he leaves Monday for the United States and the second round of peace talks with Israel, foreign ministry officials in Cairo said Sunday.

Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan will head the Israeli delegation to the resumed talks, which are sponsored by President Carter and open Wednesday at Camp David, Md. There has been no indication that Israel is prepared to yield on the major controversial issues which have deadlocked the peace negotiations since mid-November.

In fact, the Israeli cabinet meeting in Jerusalem, in addition to approving the make-up of the nine-man delegation, approved a plan Sunday to organize the water supplies on the occupied West Bank and to build a pipeline from the Sea of Galilee to supply Jewish farming settlements in the Jordan Valley.

A government spokesman said there was no direct connection to the government's autonomy plan for the future of the occupied territories. But observers said the action seemed to underscore Israeli determination to remain in the territories after the beginning of the Arab self-rule plan that was agreed on at the first round of talks at Camp David in September.

Labor strife may ease in Britain

LONDON (UPI) — Union and local government officials waited Sunday for the Labor government to approve a deal they worked out to settle the strike by 1.5 million public service workers who have closed schools and left Britain buried in garbage.

The settlement would give workers employed by local governments, such as trash collectors, school caretakers and street cleaners a 9 percent increase on their basic pay. This plus new payments under a higher-output productivity plan would take average wages from $84 to $120 for a 35-hour work week.

The employers and union officials also agreed on a study of comparable wages in private industry so that public service workers' wages could keep pace with them.

If the government approves the deal, officials said, the strikers could be back to work early this week.

In the meantime, however, schools in the northeast and in the greater London area remained closed despite an appeal by union officials that children preparing for examinations should be able to use classrooms.

The casualty department of St. Bartholomew's hospital, one of London's best known teaching hospitals, was closed Saturday because of a shortage of sterile medical equipment.

"We are maintaining a skeleton service and believe this closure was unnecessary," a union official said. "We are anxious to do nothing which will put patients' lives at risk."

The Sunday Express reported Prime Minister James Callaghan's wife, Audrey, crossed strikers' picket lines outside the Great Ormond Street Hospital for Children to offer her services to the hard-pressed medical staff. Callaghan had declared he was prepared to cross a picket line if he thought it was justified.

"Snow Minister" Denis Howell became the first government official to use the concordat between the government and the Trades Union Council announced last week when he appealed to striking road-sanding crews to obey the spirit of the pact and go back to work to save lives and injuries on the icy roads.

Howell holds a low-ranking cabinet post but is put in charge of every extraordinary occurance — two years ago he was drought minister. He currently is in charge of helping local governments clear roads and dig out from under recent snows, in view of the fact most local governments' manual workers are still on strike.

More Americans fly from Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Aother 802 Americans fled Iran Sunday aboard two Pan American Boeing 747 jumbo jets for Frankfurt, Germany, bringing to 1,684 the number to leave on five flights since the emergency evacuation began Saturday.

The British also flew some 240 Britons to Cyprus in two Royal Air Force Hercules transports.

By Sunday evening more than 2,240 Americans, Britons and Italians among the estimated 14,000 foreigners in Iran had taken advantage of evacuation flights arranged by their countries.

A Pan American spokesman said "things went better" Sunday than on Saturday, when there was a six-hour delay in the flights because of thorough body searches and American Embassy mishandling of tickets and other departure formalities.

As the flights left there was still shooting in some areas of Tehran despite newly reopened shops, factories and public offices.

Airport heist

FBI searching for suspects

FBI agent leads Peter Gruenawald into FBI office

NEW YORK (UPI) — A reputed mobster and a Lufthansa Airlines' employee were in jail Sunday in connection with the $5.8 million robbery at Kennedy Airport last December, but the FBI still was searching for at least five more suspects and the loot taken in the largest cash heist in U.S. history.

None of the $5 million in U.S. currency and estimated $850,000 in gold, jewels and pearls taken in the robbery at Lufthansa Airline's Kennedy terminal was recovered in the Saturday arrests of Angelo John Sepe, 37, a convicted stickup man, and Peter Gruenawald, 39, a cargo traffic division operator for Lufthansa.

The arrests were the first major break in the case since the robbery Dec. 11. Sepe was charged with taking part in the heist and Gruenawald was held as a material witness.

The arrests came six days after a federal grand jury in Brooklyn heard testimony in the case from seven subpoenaed witnesses.

Sepe is a reputed member of the Paul Vario organized crime family, authorities said. He was released from prison in August 1977 after serving several years for armed robbery.

He was arrested Saturday driving a new 1979 Thunderbird, which investigators said Sepe allegedly bought after going on a spending spree with his share of the loot.

An FBI spokesman said the arrests were made as the result of a joint investigation by the agency, city and Port Authority police departments and U.S. Customs agents.

Sepe was charged with theft from an interstate shipment, a federal extortion charge, possession of goods taken from an interstate and foreign shipment, and conspiracy. The first charge carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in jail and a $5,000 fine and the second 20 years in jail and a $10,000 fine.

The two suspects were being held at the federal Metropolitan Correctional Center in lower Manhattan and were to be arraigned before a magistrate in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn on Monday.

Meanwhile, the FBI pressed a hunt for at least five other suspects.

One of those is believed to be Thomas DiSimone, who police describe as having organized crime ties and who was reported missing Jan. 14, shortly after his release from prison. His wife reportedly was one of those who appeared before the grand jury.

The planning that apparently went into the heist led authorities to believe it was an inside job and 150 Lufthansa employees were given lie-detector tests.

Kemp warns of Soviet aggression

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., said Sunday President Carter and other U.S. policy makers are ignoring Soviet provocations in Iran and elsewhere because of their desire to sign a strategic arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union.

"I am gravely concerned whether there are any limits whatsoever on the accommodation to Soviet provocation our policy makers will make in order to sign a strategic arms limitation agreement with the Soviet Union," Kemp said in a statement.

Saying there was "overwhelming evidence" of Soviet interference in Iran, Kemp said the U.S. government had done nothing to protect U.S. interests in that country and in other areas.

"During one pro-Soviet coup after another — in South Yemen, Afghanistan, Ethopia and elsewhere — the administration remains strangely silent," he said. "The pitiful spectacle of the American ambassador to Afghanistan being assassinated in Soviet-supported police raid, ostensibly to obtain his release from kidnappers, and the humiliating occupation of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran with nothing more than a modest note of protest, constitutes evidence of indifference to American security interests at the highest levels of government."

The New York Republican said SALT II would "contribute little to American security if American interests are attacked at every opportunity by the Soviet Union."

He said U.S. "weakness and utter lack of purpose and response" in Iran would encourage the escalation of Soviet pressures "of the most dangerous sort."

"I urge the president not to subordinate the formulation of policy toward the Soviet Union to the signing of an arms agreement, on any terms, at any cost," Kemp said.

Cranston's son to be arraigned

BURBANK, Calif. (UPI) — Robin Cranston, 31, the son of U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif. is to be arraigned Tuesday on charges of arson and attempted murder over an incident at the home of his former girlfriend.

Police said Cranston was released on $5,000 bail Saturday afternoon after Sen. Cranston appeared at the jail with an attorney and a bail bondsman.

Police gave few details but said Cranston was arrested at the home of Trudy Beressy, 33, for violating a section of the penal code relating to the burning of personal property.

Miss Beressy was identified as an "ex-girlfriend," of Cranston.

The younger Cranston has had several run-ins with police in recent years. In 1973 he was tried and found innocent of drugging a former Playboy bunny, Joyce Williams, 23.

He had been charged with lacing the grape juice drink of Miss Williams with a powerful hallucinogenic drug, MDA, at the Los Angeles home of co-defendant David Marcus.

Cranston admitted during the trial he handed a capsule of what he had been told was a "magical pill" to Miss Williams, who testified she had gone to the house in Hollywood looking for her boyfriend and in a depressed mood.

Cranston said, however, he did not know the pill contained a drug and that the woman had asked for it and that she put it in the drink herself.

Wedding anniversary marks Harkins' 70th year

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A black cat clawing at the window screen during their wedding ceremony proved to be good luck for Clifford Harkins and Dessie Hamilton.

Mr. and Mrs. Harkins celebrated their 70th wedding anniversary Friday by repeating their vows in a ceremony conducted at the Heritage Retirement Center here. Mrs. Harkins is a resident of Heritage. Her husband lives in the nearby Hazeldel Manor.

During their original ceremony on Feb. 16, 1909, in the parsonage at Sigourney, Iowa, the family's black cat kept running up and down the window screen as the minister conducted the service.

"I couldn't see why they didn't quiet the cat," Mrs. Harkins said, "it wanted in because it was cold outside."

But the minister ignored the disturbance and concentrated on tying the knot so well that it outlasted seven decades of hard work, little money and more than their share of sickness.

After their marriage, the Harkins farmed seven years in Kansas. But times were hard. Asked if that was during the Depression, Mrs. Harkins replied "There always was a depression in Kansas."

Feeling they "needed a change," the couple came to Idaho in 1919, first settling near Burley, where they lived for four years. They farmed for many years south of Hansen before ill health forced Harkins to retire and they moved to Twin Falls.

Harkins suffered a heart attack in 1944 while fishing at Silver Creek near Bellevue. His wife said a nurse who happened to be at the site helped get him out of the water. He was hospitalized for 27 days at Hailey.

He since has been hospitalized several times, and they both have had many health problems.

But Mrs. Harkins remains cheerful and goes daily to visit her husband. They sit and hold hands and he never fails to tell her he loves her, according to nursing home attendants.

But while their affection obviously has endured, it was not love at first sight when the couple first met as teen-agers.

Mrs. Harkins mother died when she was 13, and, with the responsibility of helping to care for her four younger sisters and brothers, Dessie felt she "was quite a grown up young lady."

Mrs. Harkins recalled thinking "that was the greenest looking kid I had ever seen" when she first met the young Harkins who was visiting a neighbor across the street.

But the gangling youth and Dessie attended the same church. They both were baptized and joined the church at the same time, and gradually Dessie's opinion changed.

After her father remarried, Dessie was able to leave home. She was 18 when she married and Harkins a year older.

All of their children were born south of Hansen and attended the former Excelsior country school. Mrs. Harkins described the community as "the nicest neighborhood."

She recalled many parties at the Stricker ranch where the late Lucy Stricker would play the piano "'til 4 in the morning." Neighbors often gathered for Sunday picnics at the Harkins' lawn.

"We never knew how many people we'd have," she said, "but we always had a yardful."

Mrs. Harkins said she used to crochet "from daylight til dark" until her hands became too unsteady.

"I've made tablecloths for everyone in the country," she declared.

The Harkins had five children, four of whom are still living. They include Dorothy Scott and Harry Harkins, both of Twin Falls; Glenn Harkins of El Paso, Tex., and Don Harkins of Rievera, Ariz. There are 12 grandchildren, 26 great-grandchildren and "too many great-greats to count."

Looking back on her long married life, Mrs. Harkins said they never had much money, and during the Depression there were times when all they had were potatoes, milk, eggs from their few chickens, along with bread and a large supply of tomatoes she had canned.

"But we always got along," she said. "Seemed we were just as happy as if we'd had a lot. If I don't have things, I can get along without."

And she has a husband, who after 70 years, still remembers to say "I love you."

Drinking water still suffers pollution

By DONALD B. THACKREY

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — There is no such thing as plain water and every drop we drink contains something more, says author Arthur von Wiesenberger.

"Over 100 viruses remain in our drinking water after normal treatment processes, yet American taxpayers pay $5.4 billion each year towards curbing pollution," von Wiesenberger says in "Oasis," a "complete guide to bottled water throughout the world," published recently by Capra Press of Santa Barbara, Calif. ($6.95).

"Over 100 American cities still have water supplies that are rated only provisional by the U. S. Health Service," he says. "One of the biggest villians is chlorine and in California the nitrates from fertilizers sink into the well water."

Chemical pollution of civic water supplies is worst in Brownsville, Texas; Melbourne, Fla.; Houston, Texas; Huron, S. D., and Ilwaco, Wash., the author says.

That fact may account for the increase in the use of bottled water.

"Until recently only a small percentage of Americans drank bottled water; today it is a $200 million industry," he writes.

Mineral waters have been recognized for centuries for their healthful properties, particularly in France "where more bottled water is consumed per capita than anywhere else in the world."

In French spas one bathes, massages and soaks in the Evian, Vichy or Vittel as well as drinking it. Many women use the mineral waters for cosmetic purposes and some French chefs even cook with it.

Speakers, films offered

TWIN FALLS — Speakers and films on a variety of subjects are available to clubs, church groups, schools and organizations, according to Gordon Simpson, director of volunteers for Region V of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

The department furnishes guest speakers who will discuss the services the agency provides, such as programs on youth rehabilitation and child abuse, during the noon hour, in the evening or on weekends.

Persons or groups interested in having a program or film should contact Simpson at 734-3000 at least two weeks before the scheduled meeting.

Dear Abby

Sister-in-law's okay a must

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have tried for six years to have a child. We've seen many fertility experts, and my husband's urologist now recommends artificial insemination.

We intend to go through with it and have decided to tell absolutely no one, with one exception — my husband's brother, Gene, who was told for a very special reason.

Instead of using sperm obtained at the regular sperm bank, we came up with the idea of using sperm donated by Gene. That way our child will inherit the physical features of my husband's family.

Gene has agreed to cooperate only if his wife approves. Abby, we don't want Gene to tell his wife because we're afraid if she knows that her husband is the biological father of my child it might cause problems later on.

We say it's Gene's sperm and he can do anything he wants with it.

Are we wrong? Or is Gene?

ALL IN THE FAMILY

DEAR ALL: It may be Gene's sperm, but if he wants his wife to know what he's doing with it, it's his right. And unless Gene's wife gives her unconditional approval I advise you to use an unknown donor.

DEAR ABBY: Does a friend have the right to ask for a ride home just when you are getting warmed up at a party?

They ask you to drive them to the party and then they spoil it for you by cutting it short.

What do you say when you're having a good time and you'd like to stay a little longer?

FLAMENCO

DEAR FLAMENCO: You say, "I'd like to stay a little longer." (P.S. And the next time a friend begs a ride to a party tell that friend to be prepared to stay until you're ready to leave.)

DEAR ABBY: When you advised that family whose kids were being called atheists on how to defend themselves against the accusation, you seemed to be implying that there was something wrong with being an atheist. Well, I'm an atheist — with no apologies. I happen not to believe that God exists.

But contrary to what many religious people think, I have no desire to impose my disbelief on others or to hinder them from worshipping whatever god or gods they choose. Nor do I think that not believing in God frees me from responsibility to my fellow human beings. I consider myself as moral a person as most believers — and more moral than some I can think of! I'm certainly not a saint, but you don't find many of those in or out of church.

To me, denouncing people as atheists is as offensive and un-American as calling them papists or hebes. What people believe about God — or don't believe — is their own business. My advice to that family would be to tell their neighbors: "Judge us by what we do — not by what you think we believe." Or, in the words of a man whom some think was God and others, including you and me, consider merely a wise and good human being, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

THE MORAL ATHEIST

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dr. Lamb

Standing contracts arteries

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Dear Dr. Lamb,

Why is there a difference in taking blood pressure when you are sitting or standing? What do you consider to be the true reading?

Dear Reader,

The two main factors controlling your blood pressure are how much blood is pumped out by your heart and how small (open or closed) your small arteries are. The artery size offers resistance to the blood flow, and if they are small, the blood pressure goes up.

The size of your arteries is affected by your posture. When you stand, the small arteries in your legs all contract, so all the blood won't run down into your legs. It's a reflex we've developed to adapt to the influence of gravity. Without it, we earth creatures would be in trouble.

Some people have a tendency to have lots of blood pool in their legs when they are standing. These people will have a marked drop in blood pressure if blood pressure is taken while they are standing.

The standard method of taking blood pressure is with the person seated and with the arm held at the level of the heart. If the arm is too high or too low, it will influence the blood pressure reading. The reading will also be influenced by whether the hearing piece is directly over the artery in the arm or not, and even by how the cuff is applied.

Actually, the most accurate blood pressure reading is probably taken with the patient lying down, because the entire artery and vein system is about level with the heart and so is the arm. This way you avoid a lot of the influences of gravity.

To give you more information about what affects your blood pressure, I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-8. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Dear Dr. Lamb,

My 24-year-old son recently passed away from left intracerebral hemorrhage. He was in perfect health, having just had a thorough physical examination in the past year. Although he was an engineer, he exercised faithfully several times a day, watched his diet carefully and did not smoke. Is this deadly affliction hereditary or does it mainly strike young people? I'd appreciate any information you can give me about this problem.

Dear Reader,

I know your son's death must have been a shock to you. Such a hemorrhage is usually caused by a birth defect in one of the arteries. This defect usually doesn't affect the brain function and there's no way you can see it physically, so no one ever knows it's there until the sudden hemorrhage occurs. Rarely an enlarged artery in the brain may cause headaches and symptoms.

Since this is a birth defect, diet, physical fitness and not smoking doesn't have much to do with it. The sudden hemorrhage can occur at any age, but it does often occur in young people. If the individual is lucky, the hemorrhage is reasonably well controlled, and immediate medical assistance is available, the outcome may be happier. But often the sudden, severe hemorrhage inside the brain with no prior warning makes it impossible to do anything about it.

Lung Association computer continues to send out contribution letters

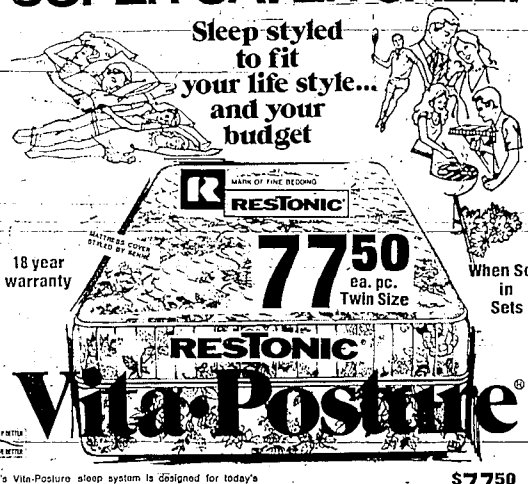

BOISE — The Lung Association has a problem with their computer — it isn't aware of 2,500 Idaho Christmas Seal contributors and is sending follow-up mailings to those who already gave.

It seems the problem started, according to Pat Carr, its executive director, when the information was lost by the carrier on the way to the computer center in California. Apparently the "somewhat antiquated computer," whose only function is to handle in-house direct mail campaigns for the association, keeps sending out notices to give instead of thank you notes.

The Lung Association, an organization which has been concerned and effective in the battle against tuberculosis and other lung diseases in Idaho since 1914, is hoping those who have not received written letters of explanation will understand.

Hepburn look revived for new movie

BY SHARON BARRETT
©Chicago Sun-Times

The "Audrey Hepburn look" originated more than 20 years ago with a young actress of slight, almost frail, frame and a designer who studied her and developed a style.

The combination of Audrey Hepburn's framework and Hubert de Givenchy's imagination made a big fashion impact on American women in the '50s, and Hepburn still buys the major clothes in her wardrobe from the man who perfected her look.

So when producer David Picker was looking for someone to do Hepburn's costumes for his new movie "Bloodline," it came as no surprise that he chose the designer who has also become the actress' friend, Givenchy.

Givenchy designed eight couture costumes for Hepburn to wear in her role as the heiress to a billion-dollar pharmaceutical fortune whose life is at stake in a big-money game of international corporate intrigue.

The character, much like Hepburn, is a well-educated, somewhat introverted woman who would choose from the classics for her personal wardrobe.

Most of the clothes Givenchy designed for the role are classically simple tailleurs and mousseline outfits, paired with wool coats of the same color.

One of his more spectacular designs is a stunning black wool dinner suit that Hepburn wears in a one-minute scene.

But Givency's piece-de-resistance is a black evening dress with breaded tulle bodice, set off with a single flower over one breast, which Hepburn wears in a scene with co-star Ben Gazzara at Maxim's in Paris.

In addition to her Givenchy contributions to the film, Hepburn and costume designer Enrico Sabbatini bought 14 additional outfits on a shopping spree in Rome and Paris.

It will be another year, though, before movie audiences get a good look at the new version of the "Audrey Hepburn look" via "Bloodline."

Based on Sidney Sheldon's bestselling novel, "Bloodline" also stars James Mason, Claudia Mori, Irene Papas, Michelle Phillips, Maurice Ronet, Romy Schneider, Beatrice Straight and Gert Frobe.

Healthy skin requires gentle care

NEW YORK — "There's no magic in a $40 jar of cream," emphasizes a dermatologist. Using pure gentle beauty aids is the key to healthy skin.

"The basic principle of skin moisturization relates to the retention of water," explains Dr. Bobby Lee Limmer, clinical professor of dermatology at the University of Texas Health Science Center. "Since water content is what keeps a woman's skin soft and youthful-looking, I suggest that women apply their moisturizer over moist skin to keep the water from evaporating." This way the skin is being softened and the water content sealed in. "I often recommend baby oil although I recognize that the moisturizer selected is largely a matter of personal preference," adds Dr. Limmer.

"Many lotions and creams are complex compounds that can lead to pore-plugging and cause whiteheads," the dermatologist explains. "Baby oil is made from pure light mineral oil and won't clog up pores."

A simple daily routine is what Dr. Limmer recommends. The face should be washed with a gentle non-drying soap twice a day, morning and night, after which the lubricant is applied to seal in the absorbed moisture.

Limiting exposure to the sun should be a No. 1 rule for any woman who wants to keep her skin as young looking as possible.

Air Force warns against gunnery trespassing

MOUNTAIN HOME — The Saylor Creek Gunnery Range is prohibited from trespassing by all persons, with certain exceptions, according to a recent reminder from officals of Mountain Home Air Force Base.

The range, located in southern Elmore and Owyhee counties, is used by the Air Force as a gunnery, rocketry and bombing range. All except those who are transiting the area on the Bruneau-Clover Crossing/Three Creeks Road and the public access road to the Bruneau Canyon viewpoint, are prohibited from trespassing on this property.

Live ammunition, rockets and bombs are used, and it is an extremely dangerous area. Grazing of livestock is limited to those persons who possess valid permits, and then only at those times specified in the permit.

Western nations schedule industry summit

TOKYO (UPI) — All heads of six Western industrialized nations and the European Common market have accepted invitations to attend the Tokyo summit scheduled in late June, the foreign ministry reported last week.

Reishi Teshima, director of the ministry's economic affairs bureau, told the Diet (Parliament) the invitations have been accepted by heads of government of the United States, West Germany, France, Britain, Canada and Italy and president of the European Common Market.

Kahn urges small firms to back Carter's guidelines

ATLANTA (UPI) — Alfred Kahn, President Carter's chief inflation fighter, last week urged small businesses to take a "central role" in carrying out the administration's anti-inflation plan.

"I need and depend upon you to play a central role in making the president's anti-inflation program work," Kahn told representatives at the White House Conference on Small Business.

He said because small businesses account for 43 percent of the gross national product and 55 percent of all private employment they are impelled to take the lead in insuring that voluntary wage and price controls are adhered to.

Kahn warned that the alternatives to the president's program — "mandatory universal wage and price controls" or even "recession" — would be a "nightmare" for the small business person.

"Every study I have ever seen demonstrated that small business was particularly susceptible to downturns in the business cycle: the same frigid wind that gives big business a slight head cold, gives most of you pneumonia; and greatly increases your always too high mortality rates," he said.

Kahn said small businesses can easily comply with the basic concepts of the Carter anti-inflation plan by limiting total wage and fringe benefit increases per employee to not more than 7 percent and cutting the average price increase to one-half of a percentage point less than the average increase for 1976-77.

He also criticized governmental regulation of small businesses, calling it costly and time consuming.

Kahn said regulations had increased the cost of doing business, but regulatory reform was "a central plank" of Carter's anti-inflation program.

"There is no denying that these regulations have increased the money costs of doing business, and that they have in a real sense contributed to inflation," Kahn said, adding that meeting federal standards and filling out the required forms had increased operating costs.

"Recently, the General Accounting Office identified 2,100 separate reporting regulations imposed by government on private industry, excluding taxes, at an estimated cost of $1 billion a year," Kahn said.

He said the Occupational Safety and Health Administration had eliminated some 40,000 small businesses from reporting requirements and OSHA was conducting a survey of the costs of government regulations to small businesses.

Kahn called for the removal of "the heavy hand of government where it restricts competition and innovation — but only with an acute sensitivity to the great social value of protecting our environment and our health.

Be wary of placement contract

(Last of five columns on jobhunting)

You, a jobhunter in 1979's increasingly tough employment market, answer a "career counselor's" newspaper ad which claims that it will give you placement advice and a consultation with "no initial charge."

You go to the firm, are lured by a salesman who name-drops you into a mood of envy until you confide your fears and hopes. At this point, the salesman suggests you go home and bring your wife with you for the next interview. "After all, this is a family affair."

Your wife accompanies you on your next visit and this time, she is the target of the salesman's special pitch. Just a few weeks ago, the spiel goes, "Mr. A., like your husband, was fired from a $50,000 job. But we managed to find him a $70,000 job in no time."

You've lost your job. Now you've lost your resistance. You're in the salesman's hand. You sign a lengthy contract, setting up counseling sessions for aptitude testing and psychological profiles.

You agree to the preparation of expensive resumes and mailing of the resumes indiscriminately to dozens of companies.

You may — or you may not — get a job or a better salary as a result of the resumes and sessions. The "counseling" may be a bit helpful or next to useless.

But the odds are if you do get a job, you probably will get it on your own and it won't be at anywhere near the salary level the career counselor's salesman led you to believe.

You will, though, have paid $2,000 (or a similarly hefty sum) when you signed the contract — before even a single interview or a single job lead.

•To avoid this trap, steer clear of any job counseling firm which leads you to believe it is also an employment agency or which makes extravagant claims or promises. Be an informed skeptic.

•Check out the reputations of any firms with which you are considering a relationship and ask for, then follow through on, references from former clients similar to yourself.

•Ask your lawyer to read every line of any contract you are offered and do not sign anything until your lawyer and you are satisfied that the firm is reputable and actually will provide you with the services you need at a fair price.

•Get those definitions and the facts on this whole befuddling subject of job assistance so you know where you're going.

•Shop with care for job advice. Consult friends, officers at your former corporation or others who have dealt with the agency or firm for whose advice you are considering paying a fee.

•Contrast the claims in the advertisements, promotional literature and the verbal sales pitch on the one hand and the contract on the other. You will find that the first will refer to "placement, jobs, success, satisfaction and earnings" but the contract simply will mention words such as "consult, advise, attempt, prepare," and usually in the fine print there will be a statement that "we are not an employment agency and cannot guarantee employment or placement."

•In investigating any of these firms, ask for names of those with similar skills and backgrounds to yours that the firm has helped to find a job like the one you are seeking. See what you get.

•Or ask the firm for two numbers: the number of clients from whom they have collected advance fees in the last year and the number they have directly helped to find a job. In many cases, the company will claim confidential information in response to all such requests. But ask what you will! If answers are your requirement for doing business, they will have to accept your demands.

•Never sign a "fine print" contract before you have read it several times at your leisure. Take a copy home with you. Read it out loud to your spouse. Note the phases of the program and the cutoff points for a partial refund, if any. What functions must the counseling service carry out before each phase is completed and you lose the right to a refund of that portion of the fee.

•Also contracts can be modified to meet the needs of both parties. You do not have to accept the requested terms. If both parties cannot agree, they negotiate. You may learn more about selling yourself by so doing than from all the counseling.

Ford announces deficit recalls on '79 Broncos

DETROIT (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. last week announced the recall of nearly 70,000 1979-model four-wheel-drive Bronco and light trucks that may have a defect that could cause a loss of steering.

A spokesman said there have been no reports of accidents or steering loss as a result of the suspected defect.

He said notices are being sent to 62,000 vehicle owners in the United States and 7,000 in Canada whose Bronco, F-150 and F-250 trucks may have the defect.

The problem involves a steering knuckle in the front axle assembly which could fracture, causing a reduction or loss of steering control, he said. "Fewer than 1 percent of the recalled vehicles are expected to require replacement of the component."

ARE YOU THROWING FERTILIZER DOLLARS TO THE WIND?

With ordinary blended fertilizer, the particles of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash are of different size, shape and weight. This causes the fertilizer separates during handling, transporting and spreading—giving uneven nutrient spread patterns that show up as streaked fields. Personal income takes year's smallest gain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Personal income rose 0.4 percent in January, the smallest gain in a year, as a boost in Social Security taxes bit into the American consumer's wallet, the government reported last weeky.

The Commerce Department said January's $7.9 billion income rise was considerably below December's $21.8 billion, or 1.2 percent increase and the $17.4 billion, or 1 percent gain registered in November.

Personal income is a closely watched economic indicator. When income increases it means there are more dollars available for consumers to spend in groceries, department stores and other retail outlets.

Consumer spending is considered vitally important to continued expansion of the overall economy.

The Commerce Department said there were several special factors which affected the January income statistics. They included:

— An increase in the Social Security tax rate from 6.05 to 6.13 percent on Jan. 1., and an increase in the taxable wage base from the 1978 level of $17,700 to $22,900 this year. The changes added about $5 billion at the annual rate in January to the increase in personal contributions for social insurance — an item that is deduced from the personal income total.

— Government payments to grain farmers under 1977 target price legislation accounted for most of the $3.1 billion increase in farmer's income in December. In January, there were no such payments, further reducing the total personal income level.

— An increase in the minimum wage from $2.65 an hour to $2.90 an hour and an expansion in the number of persons covered under the minimum wage added about $2 billion to the annual rate of increase in wages and salaries.

The Commerce Department said the 0.4 percent gain last month was the smallest since January 1978, when it was fractionally lower. Technically, the increase last month worked out to 0.437 percent compared with 0.391 percent in the previous January. When rounded, as is the standard practice, the gains were identical.

Personal income in January was at an annual rate of $1.8 trillion, up $7.9 billion from the previous month.

Wages and salaries in the private sector increased by $10.1 billion, or 1 percent. The gain was identical with both December and November, the department said.

Government wages and salaries rose by $1.7 billion compared with a $1 billion December increase. The larger gain in January was due to a retroactive payment of $600 million to employees of the U.S. Postal Service resulting from a new contract.

Farmers' income, the department said, fell sharply by $3.6 billion or 10.8 percent.

Desert Land Act case not over says Nevada agriculture director

RENO — "The case is not over yet and is not being dropped, though it's not certain what the next legal moves might be."

Tom Ballow, director of the Nevada State Department of Agriculture, proved this perspective on the recent reopening of the Desert Land Act for application in Nevada.

He noted that last Dec. 14, the secretary of interior had advised Federal Judge Bruce Thompson that he would reopen the Desert Land Act in the state. Earlier, on April 25, 1978, the Nevada State Board of Agriculture had filed a lawsuit to reopen the act.

Ballow said that though the act has been reopened for now, it does not mean the suit has been concluded. Meanwhile, he said, the reopening may enable acquisition of some additional agricultural acreage in Nevada to offset part of that being lost via urbanization and for other purposes.

He does not look for the machinery leading to the awarding of 320 acres under the act to a successful applicant as moving swiftly, however. Land in the application will have to meet water, soils, climate and other criteria or in other words be suitable for the growing of agricultural crops. There, too, will need to be a fulfilling of various requirements needed on the applications. "I just don't look to the government, BLM in this case, as moving quickly on the applications," he said.

According to Ballow, over seven million acres of land in Nevada under BLM jurisdiction have the required soils for farming although just slightly more than a quarter of a million are categorized as Class One or the best type of soils. Water is still considerably more restrictive, although there are some valleys in the state where necessary water is available. Persons have to check with the state engineer where water is concerned.

Ballow agrees with Dr. Dale W. Bohmont, dean and director of the College of Agriculture, University of Nevada, that claiming up on the land can be a hard task requiring considerable capital investment. It's one way an existing farm or ranch might stabilize their deeded land operations, he noted, since they are already there and experienced. But, both the College and the State Department will provide information on irrigated agriculture to anyone wishing to apply.

When Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall, closed the Desert Land Act, along with the Pittman and Homestead Acts which have since been repealed, he closed it only in Nevada. This is why in November, 1976, the State Board of Agriculture asked the BLM in Nevada to reopen the act and followed with a lawsuit when reopening was refused.

Sprinkler rates can be reduced without loss

BERKELEY — Farmers could reduce summer sprinkler irrigation application rates by 50 to 75 percent on such crops as winter wheat, potatoes, sugarbeets and dry beans, without suffering any yield loss, a U.S. Department of Agriculture soil scientist says.

David E. Miller, of USDA's Science and Education Administration-Agricultural Research, Prosser, Wash., has been studying a concept called "deficit high-frequency irrigation," which is daily irrigations at rates less than the estimated daily evaporation and crop use.

On a medium-textured, sandy loam soil, near the upper limit of available water at the start of the irrigation season, Miller was able to reduce irrigation rates for potatoes and wheat by 60 percent, dry beans by 40 to 50 percent and sugarbeets by 50 to 75 percent.

Plants showed symptoms of water stress but yields were not reduced. Water stored in the soil was used to offset the deficit in irrigation, but even with the water extracted from the soil, less total water was used with reduced irrigations, without reductions in yield.

Using deficit irrigation cuts water costs and reduces energy needed to apply the water. It may also be possible to reduce irrigation system capacities which would mean lower installation costs.

January lobbying cost about $20,000

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho's lobbyists are lobbying less but enjoying it more.

According to Sunshine Law disclosure reports filed with Secretary of State Pete T. Cenarrusa, Idaho's 1979 lobbyists spent $19,812.18 during the month of January for all lobbying activities. That's a reduction from the same month in 1978, when lobbyist spending totaled $32,046.04.

But while total lobbyist spending decreased, spending increased for "entertainment, food and refreshment," a separate category requiring itemization on a lobbyist Sunshine report. In January, 1978, lobbyists spent $13,753.71 on entertainment, food and refreshment, largely to wine and dine Idaho's 105 state legislators. In January of this year, lobbyists spent $15,041.31 in this category.

There are 256 persons registered as lobbyists this year while in 1978 there were 254 registered lobbyists at the end of January.

Under Idaho's Sunshine Law, a lobbyist is defined as anyone who attempts to influence the Legislature or committees of that body, into taking his advice in approving, modifying or rejecting legislation.

The largest expenditures last month were by David Hand, lobbyist for the Idaho Innkeeper's Association, and the Idaho Restaurant and Beverage Association. Hand spent a grand total of $2,659.68. According to Hand's Sunshine report, all monies went for a Jan. 22 dinner attended by the governor, the lieutenant governor and 101 state legislators.

Also high on the list of top spending lobbyists were Helen Chenoweth and Vernon Ravenscroft. The two former GOP state officials have pooled their political talents into "Consulting Associates," a private lobbying organization. In January, Ravenscroft listed $2,009.50 in total expenditures, while Chenoweth listed $1,334.51. Part of these monies were shared costs. On Jan. 11, the two sponsored a dinner for 102 state legislators at Boise's Owyhee Hotel. That dinner cost $1,239.76.

Chenoweth and Ravenscroft lobby primarily for the Valley Trout Farms and Food Fish Association, the Boise Cascade Corporation and the Thousand Springs Water Users.

Ezra H. Moore and Jeanette B. Drury also topped the $1,000 mark. Moore, who lobbies for the Idaho School District Cooperative Service Council, the Idaho Association for School Administrators and the Idaho Credit Union League, spent $1,209.73. Drury, who lobbies for the Idaho Society of Certified Public Accountants, spent $1,027.49 in January.

Designer disputes mayor

Overload blamed for plant problems

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The designer of the Twin Falls sewage treatment plant has disputed Twin Falls Mayor Leon Smith's claim that plant designers and equipment suppliers are no longer willing to try and prove the plant can operate as originally designed.

After plant equipment supplier Envirotech Inc., announced this week it will not operate the plant as long as the plant is overloaded with more sewage than it was designed to handle, Smith said "all the efforts to make the plant work by the folks that built it are over."

Jack Hammond of plant designer Hamilton and Voeller, Inc., said his firm, Envirotech and supplier Neptune Microfloc, Inc., are still willing to operate the plant if the city will take steps to limit the amount of sewage flowing into the plant to design specifications.

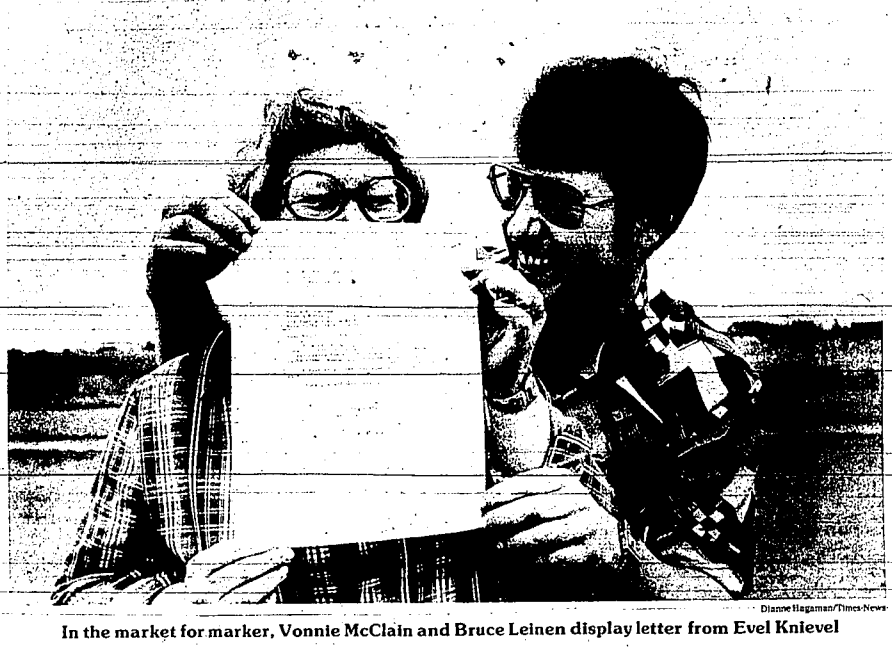

City officials, the city's consulting engineers and plant designers and suppliers agree one of the major reasons the plant has consistently failed to meet federal pollution standards is because the city is producing more sewage than the plant was designed to handle.

Hammond said since "it is physically impossible to meet the conditions of the discharge permit when the plant is overloaded beyond design specifications," then "reasonably you can't expect somebody to lay everything on the line when it's an impossibility to perform."

Smith also said Envirotech's announcement indicated Envirotech was no loner aligned with Hamilton and Voeller and was supporting the city's position that the plant was "inadequately designed."

Hammond said Smith's interpretation of Envirotech's action "certainly isn't true by any stroke of the imagination."

He said the companies are still presenting a "united front" and called Smith's conclusion that Envirotech is supporting the city's position "a crock."

Juker awarded $7,500 for loss of racehorse

TWIN FALLS — George Juker of Buhl was awarded $7,500 for the loss of a Quarterhorse gelding, in a judgment issued Thursday by Fifth District Judge Theron W. Ward.

The judge ruled against the defendants in the case, American Livestock Insurance Co. ruling the firm was given sufficient notice of the injury to the horse under terms of the insurance policy.

Juker purchased $7,500 insurance on the gelding, The Red Pony, on Jan. 21, 1977.

The gelding suffered a broken leg bone in a race and the veterinarian who treated the horse recommended euthanaziation. Juker notified the company of the accident and asked for permission to euthanize the animal in compliance with the veterinarian's recommendation.

The insurance firm argued it did not receive notice until Jan. 25, 1978 and the policy was for a one year period only and had expired Jan. 21. The firm also said the insurance was for the death of the horse and it was not killed but was injured.

Juker said he notified the firm within the legal time limit according to the policy and the insurance company refused to approve the euthanization of the animal and also refused to settle the claim.

Judge Ward ruled in favor of Juker in settlement of the claim and also stated the insurance company was "unreasonable" in refusing permission to destroy the horse because of the injury.

Sorry, marker's not for sale

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Numerous individuals have asked to buy the Evel Knievel monument in the past four years, but Bruce Leinen and Vonnie McClain probably made the most determined effort.

Leinen, a long haul truck driver for Volco Inc., saw the five foot high monument which was designed to mark the site of the Evel Knievel Snake River Canyon Jump, in the Volco storage area one day.

He first asked his boss, Warren Barry, if he could buy it and was turned down. Barry was just holding it for his friend, Knievel, Leinen was informed. Barry told him the monument belonged to the daredevil.

Leinen talked it over with a friend, Vonnie McClain, and the two decided they would be able to assume the bill owed Volco by Knievel if Knievel and Barry would agree. Again the answer was "no."

Last June 11, the two wrote a letter to Knievel, asking if he would sell the monument to them.

The answer June 21, 1978, was a very brief letter stating the monument was not for sale.

Shortly after that Knievel became involved with the courts over an alleged attack on another man and began serving a jail sentence.

"We heard he had made a statement that he planned to take out bankruptcy," Leinen said. "So we wrote to the Bankruptcy court of Montana."

The couple offered the court their proposal of paying the entire amount owed to Volco (a figure reportedly in the thousands of dollars) in exchange for ownership of the granite site marker.

The answer to that letter came from the U.S. District Court in Butte, Mont. stating there was no bankruptcy filing.

With that plan ended, the Twin Falls couple wrote to the Chamber of Commerce in Montpelier, Vermont, asking if it could provide the address of "Rock of Ages," the firm which built the marker. An inscription on the marker states "Donated by Rock of Ages" of Vermont.

In response to that letter, the two received the address and a brochure about the monument company, one of the largest in the country and located at Graniteville, Vt.

On Sept. 25, 1978, Leinen and McClain wrote to the company explaining their wish to buy the monument, adding a little flattery about the quality of work, and explaining the marker cannot be located at the jump site because it is on private property and the owner does not want it there.

There was no answer to the letter by Oct. 16, so the two wrote again, asking a price be put on the monument and asking if it had been donated to the site rather than to the daredevil.

On Oct. 27, an answer was received, saying it had been made for the site and was deeded to the Evel Knievel family by Top Rank Productions, sponsors of the jump attempt. The letter suggested McClain and Leinen contact Knievel's father in Butte, Mont.

"That's as far as we got. We decided there was no point in asking his father as he lives with Evel Knievel and we would just be starting over the same year-long route we had already taken. Knievel had informed us it was not for sale, Leinen said.

Had they been able to purchase it, Leinen said, he and McClain planned to take it to New York to an auction where they felt it would bring a sizeable sum.

Had the two been lucky enough to acquire the marker, they would have promoted it to the best possible price, Leinen said. He said they had made plans to store it while promoting it.

"We decided our first move would have been to contact NBC. Of course, we would have tried for any other national media exposure."

"I know from talking to the Volco staff that hundreds of people have tried to buy it and the answer is always the same. At least we did find out how it happened to be made and the rightful ownership," Leinen said.

The monument is still sitting at Volco Inc. gathering dust where it has been for the past four and one half years.

Maybe some day Knievel will drop by and pick it up or maybe Leinen will be asked to haul it to Butte in his truck.

Boise man wins chess title

TWIN FALLS — Larry Parsons of Boise captured the Idaho State Chess Championship here Sunday by winning a crucial fourth-round match with defending champion William Whitacre.

Whitacre, also of Boise, wound up second in the tournament, which was held at the YFCA, with four wins and one loss.

Parsons could only manage a draw in his fifth round match, but his four-wins-and-one-draw record was good enough for the title.

Eugene Cowan of Driggs won the medium class championship, and John Letterman and Randy Smolensky, both of Boise, tied for the lower class championship.

Construction to close part of Addison Ave.

By JEFF SHER
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — All through traffic on Addison Ave. between North and West Five Points will be blocked for three months beginning sometime in March.

The street will be closed while that section of Highway 93 is reconstructed, resurfaced and widened.

Traffic will be allowed to cross Addison at specified intersections.

After lengthy deliberation, the Idaho Department of Highways and the project contractor, Peter Kiewit Sons' Co. of Twin Falls, agreed on the closure in order to reduce the time traffic will be disrupted by the project.

Highway department official Bill Merritt said the only alternative to closing the street is to do half the street at a time, necessitating a longer construction period and the use of flagmen to direct traffic.

He said that approach would cause nearly as much disruption as a closure and take longer.

Kiewit Sons' manager Monte Bell said residents near Addison have been notified of the closure by flyers, and he said company employees will visit neighborhood residents to try and work out a means of providing them with the easiest possible access to their homes during the construction period.

Merritt said the company will begin work on irrigation pipe relocation about March 1 and will begin construction on the road itself sometime in the middle of March, depending on the weather.

Merritt said the entire street between the two five points should be completed in June.

The West Five Points intersection will also be reconstructed as part of the project. Work on the intersection is scheduled for completion in July, Merritt said.

He said five streets will be left open during construction to allow traffic to cross Addison. Those streets will be Jefferson, Harrison, Tyler, Fillmore and Jackson Streets.

Through traffic southbound from North Five Points will be rerouted down Shoshone Street to Second Ave. N. and back to Addison. Northbound traffic from West Addison will be rerouted out Washington Street N. to Falls Ave. and on to Blue Lakes Boulevard North. Eastbound traffic will be routed down Second Ave. W. to Kimberly Road.

City Engineer Gary Young said city crews are now surveying Sixth Ave. N. for the installation of a larger storm drain to put an end to the flooding that occurs at the intersection of Sixth Ave. and Shoshone Street after every heavy rain.

He said the project must be done in conjunction with the Addison project because the drain for the intersection runs up Sixth Ave. N. to Addison and down Addison to Monroe, where it turns north.

O'Leary dedication

TWIN FALLS — Administrators have worked out the bugs in their new school and will hold an open house at the new Vera C. O'Leary Junior High School March 11.

School officials will dedicate the new structure at 3 p.m. and open the entire facility for tours until 5 p.m.

PTA members and student council members will host the event, while teachers greet visitors in their rooms, according to O'Leary Principal Carl Snow.

Refreshments will be served.

Pesticide class offered

TWIN FALLS — A training for any farmers who have not been certified to use restricted pesticides will be held Wednesday in the mini-auditorium at the College of Southern Idaho.

The training will begin at 10 a.m., according to Jesse Wilson, Jerome County extension agent.

If a farmer has not been certified or his employees have not had the training, this free course is a way to aid them to purchase these restricted materials, Wilson said.

For more information contact the county agent office.

Bowler says dam will harm wildlife

TWIN FALLS — One of the last "significant" stretches of fast flowing water in the Snake River would be inundated if the proposed A.J. Wiley dam is built, delegates to the Idaho Wildlife Federation were told Saturday afternoon.

Aldrich Bowler of Bliss presented scientific notes compiled by his son, Dr. Peter Bowler, assistant dean of environmental services at University of California at Irvine, on the claimed environmental damage which will result from the project.

According to studies done by Dr. Bowler, sturgeon will be eliminated and there will be considerable loss in breeding habitat for trout, small mouth bass and other species which require fast, well-aereated water.

Several species of snails would become extinct and the area deserves additional study, Bowler said.

His son plans to bring 10 graduate students this summer to study the stretch of the river from the lower Malad power plant to the Bliss bridge which faces inundation.

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission has already approved the project, but the Idaho Power Co. still has to obtain licensing approval from the Federal Energy Regulation Commission, Aldrich said.

If the Wiley dam and its companion project, the Wike dam, further downstream, are built, the only fast flowing spot left in the Snake River from Shoshone Falls across Idaho will be at Clear Lakes Bridge north of Buhl, Aldrich said.

Project teaches students self-esteem

TWIN FALLS — The caseload in the Twin Falls Magistrate Court is increasing by 1,000 cases per year, according to Magistrate Paul Smith.

This figure includes traffic as well as more serious cases and also reflects the population growth in the area, but it also has convinced him that "prevention is better than cure."

Because the judge feels that comparatively few people in the community are concerned about the growing number of juveniles who appear in court he believes the public should know about a pilot program now in operation at the Lincoln Grade School in Twin Falls.

He described the Positive Action project at Lincoln as the only effort he is aware of in the entire state to teach children self esteem and give them skills in inter-personal relations which can help them avoid many of the "messes teen-agers get into."

The self esteem concept was the focal point Wednesday night in the first of a three-week seminar being moderated by Judge Smith. The series, sponsored by the Mental Health Association, is entitled "Our Children — What We Do Today Affects Tomorrow."

Panelists Wednesday night were Carol Allred, director of the pilot program, and Jim Howie, Lincoln school counselor, who both explained how the Positive Action program works. Other speakers included Ron Bennett, Child Development Center chief psychologist, and Dr. Don Stephenson, CSI professor.

Each teacher at Lincoln school spends 20 minutes daily on the pilot program, Mrs. Allred said, teaching what she termed "life adjustment skills," so children can understand and deal with their emotions.

She said the most important part of the program is training the teachers first. Since there is no curriculum available, she is developing one.

Children learn they have mental, physical and emotional needs which must be fulfilled for them to have self esteem. They learn they can control how they feel about themselves and what their reaction will be to problems they face.

"We're saying 'You can't control what happens, but you can control how you react,' either positively or negatively," Mrs. Allred said.

Howie said he tries to identify the children with "higher needs," and works through teacher and parental involvement to show them how they can have alternate ways of dealing with a particular problem or action of a child.

"We try to make the kids realize they do have some control over their actions," Howie said. "If they fail a test they can't blame the teacher; if they are in a fight, it's not all the other person's fault."

Both Mrs. Allred and Howie, who were involved in the same program at the Twin Falls High School, believe the place to start is grade school to help children avoid the problems they create by not learning they can have control over their reactions.

Bennett said other than the regional mental health center and few school counselors, and clergymen, there are few resources available to help identify children with emotional and social problems.

He described these as "kids who are overfearful, withdrawn, over aggressive, too shy, stealing, using drugs, cruel to humans or animals, indulge in anti-social behavior such as setting fires or are abused.

Children wo are moved frequently also need early identification of the crippling emotional results from this situation.

What a child needs, the psychologist said, is to feel security, important as a person that belongs, satisfactory relationship with adults and a positive self concept.

Dr. Stephenson addressed the importance of identifying children with problems early. In addition to eliminating human suffering caused when children get into trouble, it also saves taxpayers money.

Next Wednesday's session at 8 p.m. in Room 117 in the Shields Building at CSI will concentrate on Educational and Social Problems in Junior High School.

1% initiative may cut funds

Murtaugh could lose school

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH — Murtaugh schools could lose more than half their state funding if the 1 percent initiative does what state education officials think it will.

"It is something that would be hard to face," Murtaugh school Superintendent Florin H. Hulse said Tuesday. "You would just have to close down the school and send the students somewhere else."

Hulse said figures released recently by the Idaho Board of Education estimated Murtaugh schools would lose $103,000 if the 1 percent initiative goes into effect without modification by the state legislature.

"It will cut us about 55 percent," Hulse said. "When you have 15 teachers and you lose $103,000, that would cut off 10 of them."

Hulse said Murtaugh's annual budget is less than $200,000 including salaries, maintenance and special programs.

If the legislature implements the 1 percent initiative the way state officials expected, Hulse said many Murtaugh school programs would be cut.

But Hulse expressed optimism the legislature would not finalize such drastic cuts in education budgets.

"When they get this thing settled, I don't think we'll lose that much," he said. "I think they will find some way to get around it. The legislature is going to give us a year reprieve to get ready."

In other business at Monday's school board meeting, Hulse said the school district decided to solicit bids on a burglar alarm system for Murtaugh High School.

He said the decision came after a Jan. 20 break-in at the high school in which unidentified persons entered both the school building and separate gymnasium building in Murtaugh.

After the break-in officials found a $1,500 stereo set missing. The stereo had been for use in school dances.

Hulse said no suspects have been arrested in the case although one youth apprehended in connection with a Hazelton break-in admitted knowledge of the Murtaugh crime.

At Monday's meeting, the school board also voted to extend Hulse's contract for another year. He works under a three-year contract which is usually extended each year to keep it a full three years duration.

Jury convicts Brooks of 'Catman's' murder

BOISE (UPI) — A 20-year-old Boisean has been convicted of murdering Enrico Flory, 76, for his Social Security money.

A 4th District Court jury found Rory Brooks guilty of second-degree murder after deliberating 4 ½ hours Saturday.

Brooks was 17 when the 1976 murder took place in Boise. Deputy Ada County Prosecutor John Dutcher said he would have been happier had Brooks been convicted of first-degree murder because he said he believed there was sufficient evidence.

Flory, known as "the Catman of Bella Street" because he harbored stray cats, died June 4, 1976. Brooks' sentencing has been set for March 9. He could be sentenced to life in prison.

Defense Attorney John Lynn said he was disappointed by the verdict, but had not decided whether to appeal.

The six-man, six-woman jury was told by Judge Gerald Schroeder to find Brooks innocent or guilty of charges ranging from involuntary manslaughter to premeditated murder.

Authorities first believed Flory died of a heart attack and his body was cremated. However, an investigation by Boise police led to a charge of premeditated murder against Brooks and three other Boise teenagers.

Steven Wolf, 18, has pleaded guilty to second-degree murder and was sentenced last December by Schroeder to 30 years in prison.

Idaho week in review

Implementing initiative closer

By United Press International

The House of Representatives gave overwhelming approval — 58 to 12 — and sent to the Senate a bill to implement the 1 percent property tax limit Jan. 1, 1980, to top Idaho's news last week.

Besides implementing the 1 percent next year, the bill freezes local budgets at 1978 dollar figures for this year and either at 1978 levels or 1 percent of market value, whichever is lower, next year.

It provides for approval of bonds and special assessments, either as provided in the Constitution or by current law. It also allows override levies approved by two-thirds of those voting.

In addition, the measure knocks out three sections of the initiative believed to be unconstitutional and it writes back into law "functional" as well as "actual" use as definition of market value for real property.

In other news around the state:

• A warrant was issued for the arrest of fired Caldwell Recreation Department Director Vernon Morse. Morse faced embezzlement charges following an investigation into department records.

• A forgery suspect leaped from a second-floor window of the Ada County Courthouse, tried to steal a car, and then flooded his cell and set his hair on fire after being captured and returned to jail.

• The state Public Utilities Commission authorized Idaho Power Co. and the King Hill Irrigation District to go ahead with a deal to restore the district's irrigation system. The district hopes to have the system revitalized in time for the growing season.

• By a vote of 19-16, the state Senate completed legislative action on a House-initiated resolution deauthorizing $10 million worth of office buildings in Coeur d'Alene, Twin Falls and Pocatello.

• Gov. John V. Evans declared an emergency in Canyon and Washington Counties because of flooding. Evans also appealed to the federal government to assist persons and businesses who suffered property damage in the flooding. Much of the state was on the brink of flood danger throughout the week, but most sections did not receive serious damage.

• The Idaho Electric Consumers group recommended that Idaho Power Co. should reexamine its rate-setting and power allocation methods because it is energy-limited rather than demand limited.

• A state energy official said farmers, suburbanites and some gas station operators will suffer the most if the Iran oil export cutoff remains in effect and triggers shortages in Idaho.

• The Legislature passed a resolution asking Congress for a constitutional amendment or convention to balance the federal budget. The measure passed on a 24-11 vote. Idaho was the 27th of the needed 34 states to pass the measure.

• The Senate Transportation Committee again rejected a proposal to go along with its Western neighbors to defy the federal government's 55 miles per hour maximum highway speed restriction.

• Four juveniles were arrested and charged with first-degree burglary in the theft of 23 cases of dynamite, which Canyon County authorities said was to be used in a bank robbery scheme.

• An Idaho Political Science Association panel concluded the state's two-party political system is nearing extinction. One panelist, former Republican Gov. Robert Smylie, said the parties are ineffective in fund raising and inefficient at defining party policy.

Court dismisses discrimination case

NAMPA, Idaho (UPI) — Racial discrimination charges against the Nampa School District by a Caldwell woman who was not rehired as curriculum director of the district's bilingual education program have been dismissed.

U.S. District Court Judge Ray McNichols ruled the testimony of Juanita Correa be stricken from the record after she presented her case to him in a non-jury trial. The trial lasted two days last week.

Ms. Correa filed the suit in 1977 when the district did not renew her contract after the 1976-77 school year. She charged she was not rehired because she was a Mexican-American.

McNichols ruled there was not enough evidence to support Ms. Correa's case and concluded the woman also had no further right to claim violation of due process because she had not appealed first to the district.

The Office of Civil Rights also had joined in the suit after concluding Ms. Correa was discriminated against. The OCR decision resulted in a loss of $175,000 in federal funding of the bilingual program, district officials said.

Woman gets severe burn in explosion

BOISE (UPI) — Dee Ann Rees, 33, Rexburg, suffered second- and third-degree burns on 40 percent of her body when leaking propane exploded in a camper, Boise Fire Department officials said.

The woman was hurt Saturday at the Western Idaho Fairgrounds, the officials said. She was listed in serious condition Sunday at Boise's St. Alphonsus Hospital.

Mrs. Rees' husband, Alvin Rees, 35, suffered minor burns on his face and chest and was not hospitalized. Fire officials said the explosion occurred while Mrs. Rees was lighting the camper's propane stove.

Nampa sues firm for boiler blast

NAMPA, Idaho (UPI) — The city of Nampa has filed suit in Third District Court asking for $45,000 in damages because of a boiler explosion at the Nampa Public Library.

McGee Air Conditioning and Heating Co. and McKellip Engineering Co. allegedly were negligent in repairing the boiler prior to the March 5, 1977 explosion.

The boiler, the city said, exploded less than 10 hours after it was worked on and re-ignited. No one was injured by the blast.

Hamar man jailed for shooting teen

RIGBY, Idaho (UPI) — A 19-year-old Hamer man has been charged with second-degree murder in the shooting death of another Hamer teen-ager.

Jefferson County Deputy Prosecutor Alan Simms said John Spencer is accused of fatally shooting Marty Vadnais, 18, in the neck with a 30-30 rifle.

Simms said Vadnais was shot Wednesday following an argument with Spencer. The victim died at Spencer's house, where the incident occurred.

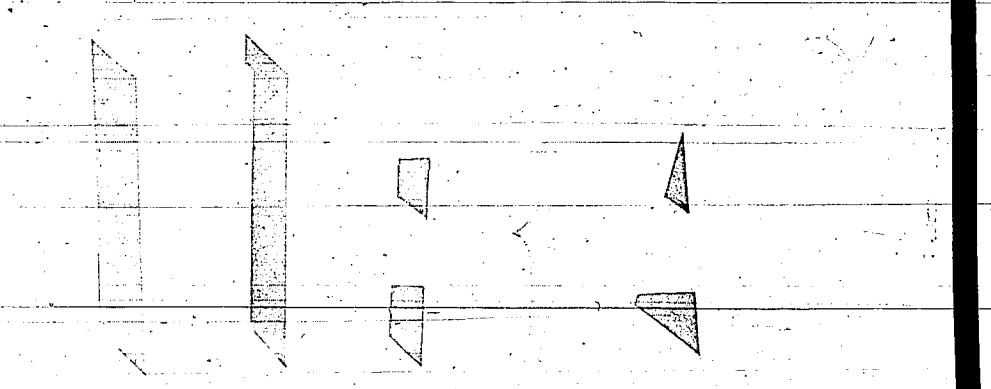

Spencer has been released from the Jefferson County Jail after posting $20,000 bond, Simms said. A preliminary hearing date has not been set.

Gunman hits cars

NAMPA, Idaho (UPI) — A pellet or BB gun was used to shoot out windows in 23 parked cars in Nampa Saturday, authorities said.

Police said the first report came in at 2:56 a.m. and was followed by several others from the north side of the city, where most of the damaged vehicles, including two police cars, were parked.

No damage estimate was available and police said they had no suspects.

Here's a tax break you can retire on.

It's during the productive, "money-making" years that people should initiate some type of savings program to meet retirement needs. But it's during those same money making years that people usually pay the highest taxes, leaving little to save for retirement.

An Idaho First Individual Retirement Account can help solve this dilemma.

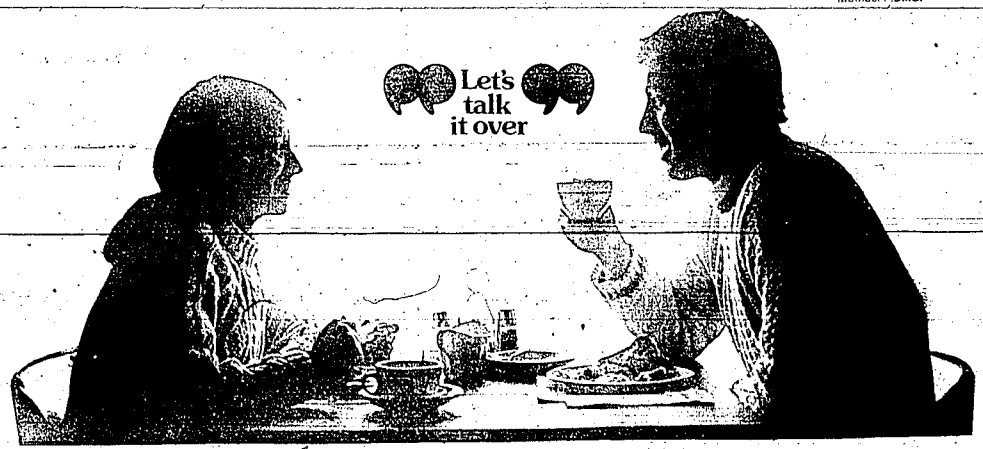

If you're not presently covered by an employer retirement program you should start your Idaho First IRA now and take a personal tax deduction equal to the amount of your contribution (up to $1,500). Your money will earn interest at the highest allowable rate, and you won't pay any income tax on either the contribution or its earnings until you retire. By starting an IRA, you are providing today for retirement tomorrow, and lowering your taxes at the same time.

There are some qualifying rules anytime you get a tax break like this. Just drop in. We'll be happy to review the entire Idaho First IRA plan with you. . .no obligation.

Give yourself a tax break today. . . for tomorrow.

Aliens helped to become legal

By ED LION

CHICAGO (UPI) — Juan's dark eyes shined and he smiled.

"You know, back home everyone talks about Chicago this and Chicago that, like it's the promised land. My relatives back home think I have a big house with a big lawn.

"Most people down there think you go to the USA and get rich no matter what. They think I'm rich."

Juan, 19, who would not give his last name for publication, has lived in Chicago with his sister for eight years. He works part-time at $3 an hour as a loader with a large firm and attends a major public university with an annual $1,100 scholarship.

Juan is one of tens of thousands of "los mojados" — the Mexican term for ones who are wet — who illegally live and work in Chicago to escape the poverty of their homeland. The flow of what authorities often refer to as "undocumenteds" or "illegals" to Chicago continues steadily in spite of tougher patrols along the border.

"Chicago is one of the largest meccas for undocumenteds from Mexico," said Jan Moreno, Immigrant Service League director of Chicago's Travelers Aid Society. "We've heard of whole villages migrating here. Only the old ones stayed home."

One social worker said they flock to the city because they believe "Chicago is paved with silver and gold."

They can be seen everywhere — huddled against the biting winds on the "El" train platforms, streaming to bustling factories and toiling in hundreds of restaurant kitchens across the city.

"There's a very large manufacturing sector here," said Robert Ahlgren, a Spanish-speaking lawyer raised in East Los Angeles who specializes in immigration cases. "They can find jobs. I have never gone to a major hotel where I do not recognize people who are more than likely undocumented.

"They work as landscapers, dishwashers, house workers, busboys, machine operators, just about everything. They sometimes hold down several jobs. They make from minimum or below to $9 or $10 an hour. The average might be $3, $4 an hour. And the large number of Spanish people in the metropolitan area allows them to easily melt in to avoid detection."

It is the plethora of easy jobs — and a Hispanic population estimated variously between 500,000 and one million — that reputedly gives Chicago the second largest U.S. mojados population, only behind Los Angeles.

Mexicans have come to Chicago since early this century to work in railroad yards and elsewhere in the Midwest's industrial dynamo.

OMAR Inc., a research and advertising firm specializing in the Hispanic-American population, cited a 100,000 figure for the Spanish-speaking undocumenteds. But some workers in the Hispanic community put the figure of "constantly ebbing and flowing" Mexican illegals closer to 400,000.

"For every 10 that leave for back home maybe 12 replace them," said one social worker.

Officials in the Immigration and Naturalization Service's Chicago office won't make an estimate on the illegal population. But they concede it is large.

"There's a big attraction here," said James Y. Banks, acting INS deputy district director. "They can make in 2 or 3 days what they make in a month in Mexico."

Many undocumenteds are single males who come seasonally or temporarily for jobs and send most of their earnings back as remittances to relatives. But some families with illegals also live in Chicago.

"There are some apartments in the city that are rented mainly to undocumented males — they're almost like dormitories," said Russell Mendez, superviser at an ISL outpost that seeks to help illegal Mexicans get residency visas.

"They live frugally and try and send as much as they can home. I know of one guy, about 24, who is here to make enough money so his wife can buy new furniture and appliances.

"He makes about $183 a week working six days a week, about nine hours a day in a factory. He lives in a room that costs him $40 a week and he sends about $150 home to his wife in Gudalajara. He lives on next to nothing, but he says in a year, he will make enough for his wife, while in Mexico it would take years."

INS officials said smuggling rings are specializing in transporting illegals to Chicago. "Often they are packed in the back of a van and don't even see light for 16 or more hours," one official said.

The first Chicago stop usually is the Pilsen area, often called the Mexican "port of entry." It once was a Polish neighborhood, but with the increasing flow of Mexicans most of its 75,000 residents are now Spanish speaking.

"People come here because it's a largely Mexican neighborhood and they can talk with others," said Mendez, pointing out his office window to stores with Spanish signs displaying Mexican foods.

"It's like home for them. Here they can eat many of the same foods as they ate in Mexico, do many of the same things. It eases the transition."

Hispanic community workers said rooms in the Pilsen area are hard to come by and there always seem to be new faces.

Undocumented children can attend Chicago schools because the system does not require proof of U.S. residency visas — just that they reside in the school district. A court in Texas has ruled illegal children have the right to public schooling.

But some parents do not send their children to school at all for fear the family will be found out and shipped back to Mexico. And some illegals — after they establish themselves — move to other sections of the city, including the largely Puerto Rican Humboldt Park area.

Army has a shortage of doctors

By JOHN J. FIALKA
©Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The Army is experiencing the most acute doctor shortage in its peacetime history, and does not have nearly enough medical personnel in reserve units to support rapid mobilization for a war in Europe, the most likely war envisioned by Pentagon strategists.

According to Pentagon sources, the problem appeared in its most glaring form during a massive mobilization exercise, "Nifty Nugget," carried out last Fall. Army planners discovered that the number of doctors, nurses and medical technicians that could be mobilized to support NATO forces was so inadequate that the only way to give proper medical treatment to large numbers of U.S. casualties would be to fly them from European battlefields to the United States.

The lessons of Nifty Nugget, which showed a number of other major weaknesses in the nation's readiness for an attack on NATO forces in Europe, are still held as classified information by the Pentagon. But those who have seen analyses of the war-game exercise say the medical problems it revealed are described as "critical."

One of the known parts of the problem is the weakening of Army Reserve and National Guard units, which, according to the Pentagon, contain 70 percent of all medical units that would be deployed in a wartime mobilization.

According to Maj. Gen. Enrique Mendez Jr., deputy surgeon general for the Army, the Army Reserve has about 1,000 of the 3,200 doctors it should have, while the National Guard has about 500 doctors to fill 1,200 slots.

"I do not see any short-term fix to the problem," said Mendez.

The Army, he said, is seeing the last of the doctors drafted before the end of the draft in 1973. Few — about one in five — remain in the Army after their time is up, despite an incentive pay program that provides doctors as much as $13,500 more than other officers make.

Meanwhile, two major programs designed to replace the draft with Army-subsidized medical scholarship students have been unable to keep up with the increasing number of vacancies.

The Army pays $20 million a year for tuition, travel and living expenses of 1,780 medical students who agree to serve a tour of duty after graduation. It also plans to get doctors from the Defense Department's newly established medical school, which will graduate its first class of 30 students in 1980.

The school, called the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences, is in Bethesda, Md. It is expected eventually to yield as many as 100 doctors for the Army, according to Mendez.

Currently, according to Mendez, the regular Army has only 4,140 of the 5,200 doctors it needs on active duty. With increasing use of incentives, Mendez believes the Army may some day begin to recruit the numbers it needs.

But he said recruiters do not appear to be able to deliver the right mix of medical specialties. Right now, he said, the Army is critically short of orthopedic surgeons, anesthesiologists, internists and radiologists.

CALL YOUR OFFICE. AND SEE WHAT HAPPENS.

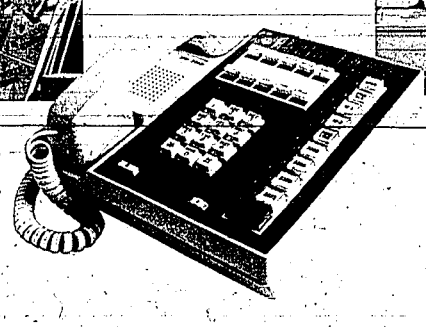

It's a familiar picture: people scrambling around an office trying to answer a telephone call. And the picture can even become more disorganized when people within an office try to talk to other people within that office.

What may be called for here is a business telephone designed to permit people to communicate with one another without running around. What may be called for is the Com Key 416.

The Com Key 416 is a telephone designed especially to help small businesses run smoothly and efficiently. It has features like paging, hands-free answering, built-in loudspeaker and pre-set intercom signaling.

All together, these features help organize your office communications so that you can run a business without running around.

Mountain Bell would like to send you a brochure about Com Key 416 and what it can do for you. Just call toll-free 1-800-525-2323 (in Colorado 1-800-332-2351.)

Crusader fights jailing witness

By DALE SINGER

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — In nearly every state of the union, an innocent person may be jailed legally for an indefinite time without compensation just for seeing a crime committed.

Such confinement is sanctioned by material witness laws, a holdover from earlier days when travel was difficult and it was not certain that a witness to a major crime would return when the suspect went on trial.

Ronald Carlson, a Washington University law professor who has followed abuse of the material witness law for years, described the statute as archaic, unfair and not particularly favored by anyone.

"There's no great sentiment to keep the law in its present harsh form. We have to get people aware of what is involved. These laws aren't used very often, but when they are dusted off, they are used in a fairly vicious form."

Carlson is just as worried about the effect such jailings have on public attitudes and on civic response to police appeals for citizen cooperation as he is for victims of the unfair but still legal incarceration.

"Many policemen say if they knew everything the public knew, every crime could be solved. These laws aren't used often, but they're used just enough to remind the civic-minded public that this danger is out there and could be used if they come forward with what they know about a crime."

Material witness laws usually are used in the cases of out-of-towners, often vacationers or workers whose job involves traveling.

Carlson's own involvement in the issue began several years ago in Iowa when four workers with a traveling carnival came upon the scene of a murder. They were held in jail for June, July and August — the most lucrative months of their seasonal employment — and released only after the suspect pleaded guilty.

"The witnesses kept asking me questions like whether they can get compensation. I had to tell them that the law allows them to be paid when they are 'in attendance on the court.'

"In this case, it meant their 94 days in jail were on the house, and on the 95th day they got five or six dollars as witnesses."

Carlson has proposed a model statute for states to follow. It recognizes the need for witnesses to be detained, but only in the case of major crimes. He believes it would remedy such situations as those in a thick folder of horror stories of the jailing of witnesses from all over the country. They include:

— A hitchhiker picked up by a driver who then shot an Oklahoma Highway Patrol trooper to death.

— A witness to the Martin Luther King assassination who had to go to court to win his release.

— A man held in a Maryland jail for 242 days.

The imprisonment itself is bad, Carlson said, but the conditions under which the witnesses are held are often worse. They are kept in the same cells as other prisoners, usually under bail high enough to prevent their release, and are not even given the same rights given to suspects.

"There has been an explosion of rights for accused persons, but this hasn't spread to witnesses. There are plenty of cases where the accused person goes free on bond but the witnesses remain in custody."

Carlson cited Missouri's law as an example of how material witness statutes are outdated. It was written in 1818, he said, when the area was still a territory and has been changed little to the present.

"Then, if a man from St. Louis saw a crime in Kansas City, it was as if he was in another world. He may have been several days' ride away. The law is archaic, but like too many laws, though conditions have changed, the law hasn't."

At least 40 states have such laws, Carlson said.

If a witness is taken into custody, Carlson said, facilities separate from regular jail cells should be provided. The confinement should be for a maximum of five days, long enough for attorneys to take a deposition, and the witness should be allowed to have a lawyer and compensation for the time he is held.

Girls A-4 champs

They love 'em in Richfield

By RANDY FREY
Times-News writer

RICHFIELD — Zooming along highway 93, a blink of the eyes at the wrong time could cause motorists to miss the small town of Richfield.

With a population of only 290 and a high school with an enrollment of just 60, Richfield looks more like a ghost town than the home of the girls A-4 state basketball champions.

But state basketball champions the Tiger girls are, and they have hopes of repeating as champions one year from now.

"We have quite a tradition here," said Coach Jim Thomas, whose girls routed Kootenai 46-29 Saturday in the state tournament finals.

It was a particularly pleasing win for the Richfield girls, especially when considering Kootenai was the team which bumped Richfield out of the state tournament last year.

"Our girls won the conference title in all three sports last year, and we have won it in volleyball and basketball so far this year," Thomas said. Incidentally, Thomas is also volleyball coach and assistant track coach.

Only 26 of the 60 students at Richfield High School are girls, and 15 of those girls went out for the two basketball teams. Simple math shows that 58 percent of the girls in Richfield played basketball.

One of the big reasons, the girls say, is Coach Thomas.

"He taught us how to shoot a basketball," said senior Susan Maestas. "You look at the other teams we played and they don't know how to shoot."

Junior Sandy Anderson, at 5-11 the mainstay of the Richfield team, said she has come a long way since Thomas began coaching two years ago. As a freshman, she was intimidated inside and kept dribbling outside for a shot, but Thomas has worked with her to use her height advantage by driving to the hoop.

Anderson still has one year to play for the Tigers, and she now hopes to play some college basketball after high school.

Just where she will go after high school she has not decided, but College of Southern Idaho is a possibility. Only problem is, Thomas said CSI is not very interested in girls from the north valley.

"I talked with one of their coaches and she told me the girls from the north valley have no fundamentals," Thomas said. "That's not true. We've played all the southern schools and beaten every one of them."

"We very seldom scrimmage in practice," said Thomas. "We work on fundamentals — defense, movement drills and shooting."

The practice sessions paid off, Richfield averaging 35 points per game this year while holding opponents to just 25 points.

The Tigers finished the season with a 17-4 overall record, losing three games by just one point.

And at most of the games this year, as usual, large and vocal crowds were on hand. Saturday, nearly 500 people showed up on the Richfield side of the gym. Pretty impressive for a town of only 290.

Anderson said she thought the Tigers would lose to Kootenai, but when the crowd began exploding after each basket things seemed to go a little easier.

And when it was all over, the girls, with eyes full of tears, began cheering "we love our coach."

"All I do is talk it up a lot around campus and the girls go out for the team sooner or later," Thomas said.

Randy Frey/Times-News

The coach will now begin concentrating on track, but in the back of his mind will be a repeat performance as state basketball champions.

He will lose three starters to graduation, but nine of the 12 girls who suited up for the state tournament will be back, including Anderson.

"We'll have to work hard to repeat, but the girls here want to play," said Thomas optimistically.

Richfield girls were all smiles after winning the state A-4 basketball championship Saturday at Burley High School. The Tigers finished the season with a 17-4 overall record, with three of their losses by just one point. Pictured are the state champions, top row, from left to right, Tami Whitesell, Kris Calkins, Robin Johnson, Sandy Anderson, Michelle Durrand, Sindi Smith and coach Jim Thomas. Kneeling are Teresa Bowen, Tanya Hubsmith, Susan Maestas, Karen Exon and Marsha Hiatt.

Big victory for Lietzke at Tucson

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Bruce Lietzke shot a steady 68 Sunday and it was good enough to wrap up a wire-to-wire victory in the $250,000 Tucson Open.

The 27-year-old Texan started the final round with a two-stroke lead, and he finished it the same way for his fourth career victory and his second in the Tucson Open in the last three years.

Half a dozen players made a run at him in the final round, but no one ever got close enough to tie him, let alone move ahead.

The 68 gave Lietzke a 72-hole score of 15-under-par 265 and won him a prize of $45,000.

There was a three-way tie for second among defending Tucson champion Tom Watson, Buddy Gardner and Jim Thorpe.

Gardner shot a final round 65, while Watson and Thorpe has 68s. They won $18,750 each and for Gardner and Thorpe that was their biggest check ever on the PGA tour.

Others at 12-under 268 were Howard Twitty, Curtis Strange, Marty Fleckman and Vic Regalado. Twitty shot 65, Strange 66, Regalado 67 and Fleckman 69.

Lee Trevino never was able to get anything going in the final round and finished with a 68 that put him at 269, four shots behind Lietzke.

Lietzke won the 1977 Tucson Open when he sank an 80-foot birdie putt on the fourth hole of sudden-death to beat Gene Littler. That was his first career victory, and he later won the Hawaiian Open in that year and the Canadian Open in 1978.

At one point in the third round Lietzke had a six-stroke lead but bogeyed three holes coming home and almost blew the tournament.

Sunday, on a perfect golfing day with bright sunshine, no wind and a temperature near 80 degrees, he birdied the first hole to increase his lead to three strokes but gave it right back when he bogeyed the second.

CSI to host Eastern Utah

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho will make its final appearance of the regular season by hosting Eastern Utah at 7:30 p.m. today — barring the siting of the regional tournament here next month.

The rematch of a two-point battle in Price last week will kickoff a three-game week for Coach Mike Mitchell and his crew. They will travel to Bend to play Central Oregon Wednesday night and return for the big one of the week Friday at Ontario against Treasure Valley. A Friday victory would clinch at least a tie for the regional top spot and put CSI in a position to win it outright in the season finale at North Idaho March 3. That would be true if Treasure Valley can't beat Ricks in Ontario.

When CSI and Eastern Utah met last week it took a couple of late free throws by Richard Prospero to squeak out a 48-46 victory.

"Eastern is a very hard team for us to defense," Coach Mitchell says. "They have everyone in that 6-4 range." Eastern forced CSI out of a man defense in the first four minutes and into a zone, a move that caused Coach Mitchell considerable anguish when he afterward assessed what he considered to be CSI's poorest showing of the season.

Eastern brings some firepower into the game. George Minic was particularly effective against CSI last week, especially in the late going when CSI ran up leads to six points but couldn't get away.

There also is speculation if Eastern will have its top scorer, Rick Bakker, available Monday night. Bakker missed the first meeting due to a hamstring pull and was held out of the game because of some conference action on the weekend.

Wednesday's game at Bend doesn't appear to hold threat the Bobcats mustered the past two years when they were the best shooting junior college team in the Pacific Northwest. Just about all those gunners are gone and Central Oregon didn't appear to have the punch when it played the Eagles in Twin Falls earlier this season.

The key, of course, comes Friday at Treasure Valley. The Eagles will do well to consider it a must and crucial game because TVCC has a history of being a team capable of great lows and brilliant highs.

Part of those low instances came when the teams met in Twin Falls 10 days ago. TVCC hit only three of 33 attempts from the field in the first half. The high came Friday night when Treasure Valley became the first team this year to beat North Idaho in Coeur d' Alene.

"We know that Treasure Valley isn't going to shoot nine per cent against us again, particularly on their home floor. You also have to remember that we couldn't do much more to them and were only ahead by 13 points at halftime," Coach Mitchell reminds.

The following week CSI will travels to Rock Springs and Riverton to play Western and Central Wyoming and then take the next week off before the "big game" at North Idaho March 3.

Tanner captures tennis games prize

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Defending champion Roscoe Tanner cruised to a 6-4, 6-2 victory over fellow American Brian Gottfried Sunday to win the $35,000 first prize in the $250,000 Tennis Games at Mission Hills Country Club.

Tanner, of Palm Springs, was broken only in the fourth game of the second set. Gottfried committed too many errors at the net and was unable to defend against Tanner's passing shots.

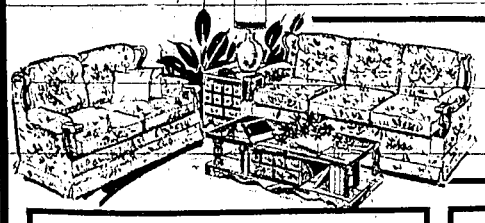

Gottfried, the 1977 champion in the Grand Prix event, earned $17,500 as runner-up.

Eighth-ranked Tanner, who had upset top-ranked Jimmy Connors Friday, had little trouble with Eliot Teltscher Saturday, beating him 6-4, 6-4.

Gottfried, who went into the tournament with a fifth-ranking, lost his first set Saturday to Harold Solomon, seeded fourth, 6-1, and fell behind 4-1 in the second set before taking the match 1-6, 7-5, 6-2.

"Brian didn't return my second serve very well today, except for a couple of games," Tanner said after the victory. "I think that was the key to the match.

Jerome's Curtis Cooley captures A-2 crown

By GARY ELIASSEN
Times-News writer

JEROME — Curtis Cooley of Jerome brought home Magic Valley's only individual state wrestling title Saturday night.

Despite suffering a cut over his eye in the semis Friday night, the 129-pounder (six stitches and all) whipped Tyler Bowles of Preston 8-4 to claim that weight division's crown.

"This is something I've been working for four years," said Cooley at work at a Twin Falls Restaurant Sunday. "I'm feeling pretty good today."

A senior, Cooley hadn't come that close in his three previous years. Last year, he was beaten in the consolation semi-finals.

He credits the cut over his eye for giving him more incentive to go after this year's state title.

"If anything, I think I wrestled better after getting cut Friday night," he said. "The guy I had to wrestle was a lot stronger than I, but I just forgot about the cut and went after him."

Behind in the early going of the match, Cooley rebounded and almost pinned Bowles once. But finally had to settle for the 8-4 victory.

For the year, Cooley proved he was the best in the state by racking up an 33-2 record (26-2 on the season, and 29-2 after district).

Another Buhl wrestler, Terry Wall, who was rated number one in the state, suffered a torn cartilage and had to forfeit his match for the state championship in the 141 weight division.

"It was unfortunate," said Coach Skip Andrews. "I know Terry could have taken him."

Wall suffered the injury in his semi-final match Friday night, but was able to go on and win.

Another top-rated Magic Valley wrestler, Bob Ekrut of Buhl, lost the championship in the 188-pound division in overtime. Greg Steele of Buhl took fourth place at 155.

Three other Buhl wrestlers, Rob Gletzen, Shawn Chapman and Troy Harvey, all lost in the consolation rounds.

Mike Snodgrass of Twin Falls made it to the semifinals of the consolation round, but was defeated 8-6.

Nampa, Preston, Firth nab team championships

NAMPA, Idaho (UPI) — Nampa, Preston and Firth all won state team wrestling championships in convincing fashion Saturday night at Nampa.

Nampa captured its first class A-1 title, while Preston took the A-2 crown and Firth the A-3 title.

The Bulldogs grabbed the lead on the first day of the three-day tournament and never trailed thereafter, winning with 133 ½ points. Blackfoot came in second with 98 points, Lewiston was third with 77, and defending champion Skyline and Capital each had 74 ½.

Team depth provided Nampa's margin of victory. The Bulldogs had two individual champions, Jeff Needs at 185 pounds and Jim Russell at 167. Nampa also had four other matmen place in the top four of their weight classes.

Blackfoot also had two champions — Tom Hugie at 105 pounds and Mickey Guerra at 112. And Skyline had two titlists in 98-pound Zane Jones and 138-pound Doug Feldo.

Capital was the only other A-1 team with more than one winner. Rick Haddock took the 119-pound title and Darby Lewis capped his undefeated season by winning the heavyweight category.

Preston won the A-2 title going away as Cordell Anderson led the charge in winning his third straight state title in the lighter classes.

The expected close duel between Preston and Snake River never materialized Saturday as Snake River, the second-round leader with six wrestlers in the finals, could win only twice.

Preston had 144 points and Snake River ended up with 124 ½. Defending winner Shelley was a distant third while Madison — with three champions — finished fourth.

Though winning only one individual championship in the A-3 competition, Firth had no problem taking its first state title with 138 ¼ points.

North Fremont finished second with 90 points and Parma wrapped up fourth place behind Aberdeen.

Top black tennis player captures Futures event

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Sixth-seeded Renee Blount of St. Louis, the top black woman tennis player, won the $25,000 Futures of Columbus women's tennis tournament Sunday, defeating 18-year-old Iva Budarova, the Czechoslovakian junior champion, 7-6, 6-1.

It took some time for the 21-year-old winner to get untracked, however, as the challenger, a baseline groundstroker who hits lots of topspins, opened up a 3-0 lead in the opening set and seemed to have things well in hand.

But Blount, a player in the serve-and-volley mold, equalled at 3-all, and the set eventually went to the 12-point tie-break.

And it was here that Blount's strength showed to good advantage, as she forced most of the play, causing Budarova to commit five errors.

Accident kills swim coach

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Indiana State University swimming coach Duane Barrows of Terre Haute was killed early Saturday night in downtown Louisville after the car he was riding in struck a concrete signpost and burst into flames.

The 50-year-old coach was pronounced dead at the scene. Jefferson County Deputy Coroner Lloyd Workman said Barrows died of multiple injuries.

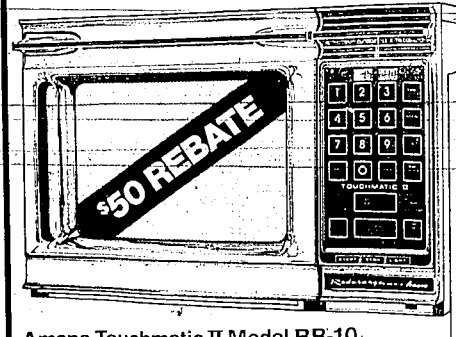

Louisville police say the car, owned and driven by Jeffrey Selby, 20, of Peterburg, Ind., a member of the ISU swim team, was westbound on I-64 when it swerved into the left lane, striking the front of a tractor-trailer truck.

Five other members of the team in the car at the time of the accident were injured and taken to Louisville General Hospital where two were held for further observation.

Barrows was ISU swim coach for 13 years. He is survived by his wife and four children.

Girls basketball

Last second shot gives Borah A-1 crown

BOISE (UPI) — Borah's Kathy Griswold latched onto a rebound of her missed shot with one second left Saturday night and put it back in to give the Lions the state class A-1 girls basketball championship in a 49-47 win over Boise.

Griswold finished the night with 12 points and Connie Sandlund led the Lions with 18. Jodo Osborn threw in 10 points.

Chris Acarregui dumped in 19 points for Boise and Cindy Brady chipped in 14.

Borah led its cross-town foe 24-22 at the half.

Sandpoint edged Moscow for third place, while Highland grabbed fifth with a 39-35 win over Capital.

Grangeville sweeps to A-2 championship

POST FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — Grangeville center Liz Chicane dumped in 24 points and hauled down 18 rebounds Saturday night as the Bulldogs won the state A-2 girls high school basketball tournament by running away from Vallivue, 55-25.

Chicane poured in eight of Grangeville's eight unanswered points in the opening minutes and picked up 18 of her points while sparking the winners to a 30-10 halftime lead.

Vallivue star Steff Odermott suffered through an 0-for-10 field goal shooting night and had only one point. But the 5-4 guard picked off 14 rebounds and added seven assists.

In the battle for third, Madison beat Preston 46-41. Emmett dumped Rigby 62-49 for fifth place.

McCall overcomes Homedale for A-3 title

LEWISTON, Idaho (UPI) — McCall-Donnelly snared the state girls A-3 basketball championship Saturday night, 40-32, by hitting inside shots and stunting Homedale's outside shooting game.

Lynn Olson scored 16 points to spearhead the Vandals, while Julie Calcorta and Dana DeGarimore popped 10 points each.

Homedale's Julie Uranga hit seven points in the first half to pace her team out in front, 21-15. But the Vandals shut her off to two points in the last half. Uranga still led her team with nine points.

Genesee crushed Shoshone 51-10 for third and Sugar-Salem beat Garden Valley 35-32 for fifth.

Wins all events

Speedskating title to Eric Heiden

INZELL, West Germany (UPI) — American medical student Eric Heiden won all four events to capture the sprinters' world speedskating championship Sunday for the third consecutive year.

Russians Jevgeni Kulikov, the Olympic champion, and Anatoly Medennikov, the only real threats to Heiden's dominance, both fell, erasing their hopes.

The brilliant 21-year-old American from Madison, Wis., has won eight world titles in three years. A week ago, he won the allrounders' title, also for the third time, in Norway and he now hopes to capture five gold medals at the 1980 Olympics in Lake Placid, N.Y.

The women's event turned into an American-East German duel after Russia's defending champion Ljubov Sadschikova showed poor form on the first day, when she placed only 30th in the first 1,000 meters race.

Heiden's sister Beth, the favorite, won both 1,000 meter races without difficulty, but faded in the two 500 meter events.

Fellow American Leah Mueller-Poulos, the 1974 sprinters' world champion, stepped into the breach, however, to win both 500 meter events and the world championship title. Beth Heiden won the silver medal ahead of two East Germans.

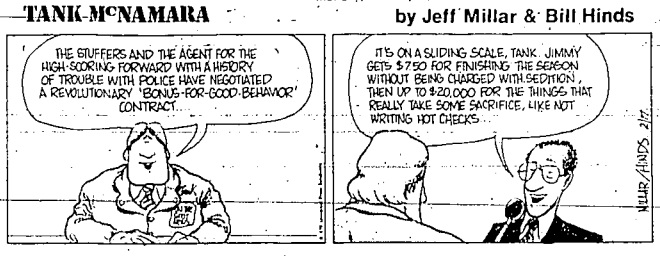

Canadian hockey on the way out?

LA CHAUS-DE-FONDS, Switzerland (UPI) — Canadian hockey is doomed unless strict measures are taken to set the game on a new course, Jean Cusson, a prominent Canadian coach, predicted Sunday.

Cusson, a member of father David Bauer's national team in the sixties and a player-coach in Switzerland these past nine years, said: "After all those years in Europe you really appreciate hockey the way it should be played. It is a healthier game and more technical.

"In Europe, you don't have to play the intimidation game, and a player's size is not so important."

Tougher testing procedures under study for racehorses

ALBANY, Calif. (UPI) — In the aftermath of a drugging scandal at Bay Meadows race track, state officials are proposing tough new testing procedures for racehorses.

Racing officials said they were concerned that a liberal licensing policy, coupled with lax track security, may have contributed to the Jan. 30 doping incident.

Although no licensees with prior felony convictions have been implicated in the scandal, investigators said they have evidence that there have been instances where racing licenses were issued to persons convicted of dangerous drug offenses and involved in race fixing.

In an effort to banish drugs from California horseracing, the racing board will present a proposal Friday to ban giving a racehorse any medication from the time he is entered to race to 72 hours before post time. Any horse found to be under medication would immediately be disqualified.

Certain medications, such as muscle relaxants, steroids, antihistamines and analgesics, can now be administered to a horse up to 24 hours before the race.

Jan. 30, five pacers in the 10th race were drugged with reserpine, a depressant. Race officials found two of the doped horses before the race — which was allowed to proceed anyway.

The California Horse Racing Board and the state Department of Justice conducted an investigation but failed to turn up any suspects.

Dr. Myron Thom, a racing veterinarian for 30 years, said the spot check drug testing now done after each race was inadequate. "We come up with new testing procedures, they come up with new drugs."

Wildcats near Big Sky title

By United Press International

It's nice to be on top of the Big Sky Conference and Weber State Coach Neil McCarthy says he'll savor the feeling for a week before his Wildcats final regular season game of 1979.

Weber State knocked off Idaho 56-45 last Thursday night and then edged Gonzaga 73-66 Saturday night in Ogden, Utah, to clinch at least a first-place tie in the 1979 Big Sky race, and earn the spot as the host of the four-team conference playoffs in two weeks.

Idaho State also earned one of the other four playoff berths in Ogden, Utah, March 2-3 with a pair of homecourt wins last week. And the other most likelies for the two remaining spots are Northern Arizona, the winner of next weekend's Montana-Montana State game, and Gonzaga.

"We're pleased we got the two wins now," said McCarthy. "We don't have to worry about winning next Saturday night at Flagstaff, Ariz. Somehow we managed to make both the Idaho and Gonzaga games close and yet still win them. It's a talent I wish we didn't have.

"That was a real team win against Idaho. We were led by Kurt Moore and Bruce Collins with only 10 points each. But we got scoring from eight players. And Saturday night we got double-figure scoring from all five starters — including Dave Johnson's 18 points to lead the way."

Weber State is now 22-7 on the season and 10-3 in the Big Sky with a 1½ game lead over 8-4 Idaho State. The Bengals managed to beat Montana State 89-83 Friday night, but needed four overtimes Saturday night to edge Montana 78-77 in Pocatello.

Northern Arizona also kept its playoff bid alive with two wins, downing Gonzaga 84-65 last Thursday night in Flagstaff and then brushing off Idaho 89-62 Saturday night. And the ease with which the Lumberjacks whipped the same two teams Weber State just managed to seat must brighten NAU's playoff hopes.

The Lumberjacks close out the regular season hosting Weber State. A win would give NAU an 8-6 record, good enough for one of the four spots in the tournament's opening roun in the Dee Events Center.

Boise State started the week with a 79-78 overtime win over Montana on Friday night in Boise, but the Broncos lost at home to Montana State 70-65 Saturday night.

In the only non-conference game during the week, Idaho whipped Portland State 97-79 last Sunday. But the Vandals followed up the win with two losses on the road in Ogden and Flagstaff.

In the final week of regular games, Boise State is at Idaho and Gonzaga hosts Idaho State next Friday night. And next Saturday night, Weber State heads for Northern Arizona, Montana hosts Montana State, ISU is at Idaho and Gonzaga hosts BSU.

BYU takes control in WAC conference

By United Press International

Brigham Young Coach Frank Arnold knows he has most of the chips on his side of the table.

Arnold's Cougars assumed control of the Western Athletic Conference race this past weekend with a 76-50 beating of rival Utah. The victory gave BYU a 7-2 league mark with Utah a full game back at 6-3 with just two weeks left in the league race.

What's more, the rest of the schedule favors the offensively tough and rapidly maturing Cougars. BYU plays two of its next three games at home and the prospects of injury-riddled Utah catching the Cougars don't look very promising right now.

The victory was the second runaway win for BYU over Utah this season and broke a five-year winning streak by the Utes on BYU's homecourt. The Utes, playing without injured starters Danny Vranes and Earl Williams, were simply no match for the fastbreaking Cougars who are now 17-7 overall.

Vranes is still recovering from a concussion suffered against New Mexico last week while Williams is out for the rest of the year with a dislocated ankle suffered in practice this past week.

The loss of Vranes and Williams forced Utah Coach Jerry Pimm to try and slow down the tempo, but the Cougars converted six Utah turnovers into baskets midway through the first half to open up a 26-16 lead that just kept getting bigger.

"Our strategy was to waste a little time on each possession so they would extend their defense and we could get inside," Pimm said. "I didn't even recognize some of the combinations we had on the floor at times and then their freshmen forwards ate us up."

BYU's young forwards, Devin Durrant and Fred Roberts, combined for 32 points in the victory.

Arnold conceded the loss of Vranes and Williams had to hurt the Utes, but said the outcome would have been the same regardless.

"It would not have made a difference, we proved that in Salt Lake City," said Arnold, referring to the Cougars' earlier 90-76 win on the Utes' home floor.

Elsewhere in the WAC this past weekend, New Mexico kept its postseason hopes alive by splitting on the road. The Lobos lost 66-63 in overtime to Wyoming but took Colorado State 77-69.

Wyoming assured itself of only its second winning season in the past nine years with win over UTEP.

San Diego State ran its record to 15-8 with a 94-91 win over Nevada-Las Vegas.

Hawaii, scheduled to join the league in July, split two home games, losing in overtime to Alabama-Birmingham 86-82 and downing Portland State 99-85. The Rainbows are 7-16.

Briefly in sports

U.S. team shines

BEMIDJI, Minn. (UPI) — The U.S. Ski Team captured the top five places for both men and women Sunday in a 15 kilometer cross country event.

Jim Galanes of Brattleboro, Vt., breezed through the course with a time of 50:21 followed by Bob Treadwell, Amherst, N.H., in 50:50 and Doug Peterson, Hanover, N.H., in 50:58.

Judy Rabinowitz of Anchorage, Alaska, led the women with a winning time of 1:00:12. Second place went to Lindsay Putnam, West Newbury, Vt., in 1:00:59 and third place to Jennifer Caldwell, Putney, Vt., in 1:01:31.

Tiller wins at Anita

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI) — Heavily favored Tiller, bumped at the start, closed with a rush in the stretch to score a 3½-length victory Sunday in the 41st running of the $110,800 San Antonio Stakes at Santa Anita Park.

Considered a turf runner, Tiller scored his second straight stakes win on the main track to stamp himself an early-season contender for national honors.

The result of the race was held up for nearly 10 minutes by a stewards' inquiry which led to the disqualification of Mr. Redoy from third to last place for interference in the late stages of the race. Painted Wagon was a surprise second while Life's Hope moved from fourth to third on the disqualification.

New Orleans marathon

METAIRIE, La. (UPI) — A wheelchair-bound marathoner rolled himself across the finish line ahead of 1,400 runners Sunday in the 16th annual Mardi Gras Marathon — run across Lake Pontchartrain on the world's longest bridge.

A strike by New Orleans policemen threatened to cancel the marathon, as it had most Mardi Gras activities. But late Saturday, sponsors received permission to use the 24-mile Lake Pontchartrain Causeway as the world's longest track instead of their original course through New Orleans.

Bob Hall of Boston rolled over the finish line in a wheelchair with a time of 2:07:11. Four minutes later, John Dimick of Brattleboro, Vt., was the first runner to finish.

Bulls' suit to begin

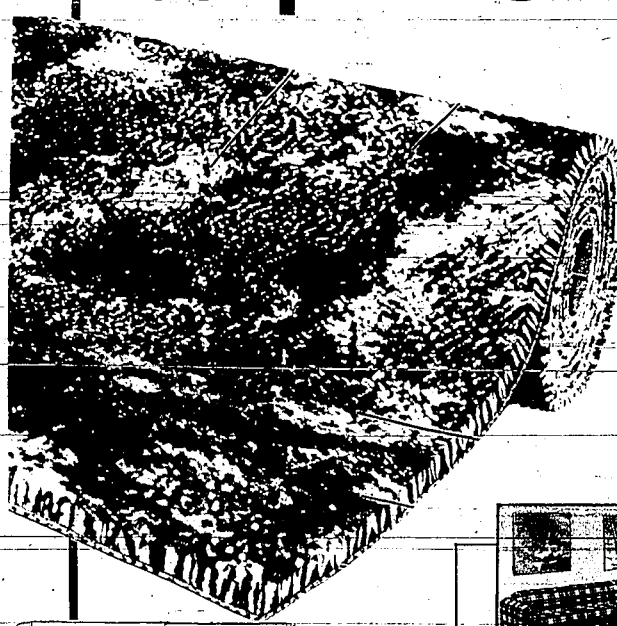

CHICAGO (UPI) — A multi-million dollar federal antitrust and conspiracy suit will begin this week — brought 7 years ago by a Milwaukee realtor who contends he was illegally denied the chance to acquire the Chicago Bulls.

Marvin L. Fishman filed the suit against Arthur Wirtz, William Wirtz, Lester Crown and Philip M. Klutznick, principal owners of the Bulls, contending they blocked his efforts to acquire the NBA franchise by refusing to grant him a lease in the Chicago Stadium.

Donnie Allison (R) rushes to help his brother Bobby (on ground) after fight with Cale Yarborough UPI

Petty wins brawl-marred race

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Richard Petty won the race and now wants to watch the TV replay of a fight that was the aftermath of a bumper and fist duel between Cale Yarborough and Donnie Allison which allowed King Richard to scoot by and win Sunday's $500,000 Daytona 500 auto race.

Petty's win by a car length over Darrell Waltrip broke his winless streak on NASCAR's Grand National trail which may have contributed to an ulcer that ultimately led to the removal of 40 percent of his stomach. His last big win was the Firecracker 400 at Daytona on July 4, 1977.

A crowd estimated at over 100,000 was left breathless at the finish and gave Petty, their favorite son, a resounding ovation. Members of Petty's crew and some onlookers leaped on his Oldsmobile for the ride to victory lane.

Yarborough and Donnie Allison were locked in a battle for the last 50 miles and it appeared one or the other would drive off with the $73,000 winner's purse.

But both their nerves and cars were shattered on the final lap. Coming out of the backstretch Yarborough tried to go under the leading Donnie Allison. Donnie refused to yield and crowded Yarborough into the infield grass. The ultimate collision knocked them out of contention and enabled Petty to add to the estimated $3 million he has earned in two decades of racing.

"This is the worst thing I've ever seen in racing," said Yarborough. "I had the race won, there was no doubt about it. But Bobby Allison (Donnie's older brother) waited on us so he could block me off. It was evident that I had him beat but they double-teamed me, if they don't suspend the Allison's there ain't no justice in NASCAR."

Bill France Jr., a Daytona director, said, "We'll look into the films of the incident and then we'll take appropriate action."

The Yarborough-Allison melee erupted into a fistfight after the cars involved came to a halt. When Bobby Allison, sensing there would be a fight, pulled his car alongside, Yarborough, a former Golden Gloves boxer, slugged the older member of the Hueytown, Ala., gang.

"I don't think Bobby slowed down deliberately," said Donnie in defense of his brother. "Cale had made up his mind he would pass low and I made up my mind he would pass me high. He went off the track when he tried to pass me low. He spun and hit me."

Petty said, "I finally lucked out. My luck had been like what happened to Donnie and Cale. They were running good and something happened.

"I had a real good feeling about today. I was running third and would have been happy to finish there, but everything began falling into place. When you have confidence you make those good moves."

A.J. Foyt, a four-time Indianapolis 500 winner, scooted across in third place, Donnie Allison was fourth and Yarborough fifth.

Petty averaged 143.977 miles an hour in the race that had 36 lead changes among 13 drivers.

Buddy Baker, who set a qualifying record of 196 mph last Sunday to grab the pole position, was knocked out in the 46th lap with a distributor problem.

"If there ever was a perfect race car, this was it," Baker moaned after his latest failure to win his first Daytona 500 in two decades of racing in the classic. "The car never ran, it was skipping and fouled up on the first lap. I'll tell you one thing, I'm a disappointed man now."

There was a five-car collision on the 54th lap that made the spectators wince and remember the fiery accident Saturday that put Don Williams of Madison, Fla., in the intensive care unit of Halifax Hospital with head and chest injuries.

David Pearson, the 1976 Daytona winner, was the only major driver involved in the crash that started when rookie Gary Ballough lost control while riding in the middle of a 30-car train draft and set off the chain reaction.

Petty, who watched his son Kyle win his first-ever race last Sunday and admitted he was more nervous at that time than when he runs his own race, was cool under pressure. He led from the 60th to the 69th lap, and then ran in the top five for most of the race.

"We won, we won," screamed Petty over the radio as he took his victory lap.

Alcott sinks Post in playoff round

MIAMI (UPI) — Amy Alcott sank a 20-foot putt from the fringe on the third playoff hole Sunday to defeat Sandra Post and win the $15,000 first prize in the 1979 LPGA tour's opening event.

Post, an LPGA veteran, forced the playoff by laying a 3-wood two feet from the pin on the par-5 18th hole and sinking the putt for an eagle 3.

Both women carded regulation pars on the first two playoff holes — the 16th and 17th — before Alcott ended it with her 20-footer.

It was the second time Alcott had defeated Post with a putt of 20 feet or longer. In the 22-year-old's third tournament of her career in 1975, she dropped in a 25-footer to win the Orange Blossom Classic and shut Post out of a playoff.

Both finished regulation in 1-over-par 73 and a 72-hole total of 213.

Tied for third at even par 216 were Pat Bradley, who fired a tournament low 68 over the par-72 Country Club Aventura South course, and Jan Stephenson, who shot a 71 Sunday.

Next at 217 were Jane Blalock, who had a 71, and Beth Daniel, the former U.S. Amateur champion, who finished her first event as a pro with a 70.

The victory in this $100,000 event was Alcott's sixth as she starts her fifth year on the tour. Her only win last year was at the American Defender Classic at Raleigh, N.C.

Post had staked Alcott to a two-shot lead with a double-bogey 6 on the par-4 fourth hole Sunday and didn't pull even until her eagle on the 72nd hole of the tournament.

Post's double-bogey came when she drove behind a tree, had to lag out, went over the green on her third shot and two-putted for a 6.

Banks, Gminski pace Duke to big victory

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Forward Gene Banks and center Mike Gminski combined for 45 points Sunday to lead sixth-ranked Duke to an easy 88-72 victory over ninth-ranked Louisville.

Duke got off to a 12-2 lead and the smaller Louisville team was never really in contention. The closest Louisville got in the second half was a 14-point deficit in the closing minutes.

Duke pushed its record to 19-5 in the nationally televised game, while Louisville dropped its second game in less than 24 hours — giving the Cardinals a 22-6 record.

The cavernous Charlotte Coliseum was sold out for the nationally televised game, despite more than eight inches of snow which continued to pile up outside the Coliseum.

Banks finished with 23 points and 12 rebounds, while Gminski added 22 points and nine rebounds in addition to blocking three shots.

Duke moved to a 20-6 lead midway through the first half and led by 19 at intermission. The Blue Devils hit 57.4 percent of their field goals to 36.4 percent for Louisville.

Duke continuously hit the outside shot against the Louisville zone, and Coach Denny Crum said his team was really never in the game.

"We came out to keep the ball out of Gminski's hands inside and hope they missed the outside shots," he said. "But they just came out and hit everything. Their outside guys just shot the eyes out of it."

Crum said the Cardinals "didn't play poorly. We played pretty even, after the half, but we just got down so far in the first half."

Jim Spanarkel scored 16 points for the Blue Devils, who are tied for the lead in the Atlantic Coast Conference regular season race, and Bob Bender added 10 points.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Oswald: "After reading Peter Stenberg's new book 'Play Bridge in Four Hours' it seems a good idea to devote some articles to really simple hands."

Alan: "Here is a really easy one. It illustrates Peter's basic rule of play which is to lead toward your high cards, not away from them."

Oswald: "South knows from the bidding that at worst his slam contract will depend on a finesse so he bids it. Sure enough it turns out that North's king of clubs is worthless and the king of hearts must be finessed."

Alan: "Chance led and continued and South ruffs the second one. South wants to be able to lead twice toward his high hearts. Therefore, he must be careful to ruff that club with one of his honors. Now he cashes his king of trumps, leads his eight spot that he has saved to dummy's nine, leads a heart from dummy and finesses against the king. After that it is a simple matter to lead an honor, overtake with dummy's ace, finesse once more against that king of hearts and bring the slam home."

Oswald: "Elementary for an average player — mighty good for a beginner."

A California reader asks why we do not open this hand one notrump.

We never open one no-trump with a singleton — even a singleton ace. Such hands almost always play better in a suit and the way to find suit contracts is to start with a suit bid.

Oregonians unite to keep 'invaders' out

By CLYDE JABIN

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — One of Oregon's most popular television ads these days shows a state policeman at a border stop who finds a motorist bringing in beer not brewed by the state's only brewery.

"That's a felony," barks the officer on finding out the motorist is not just a tourist but a developer moving to Oregon from California.

The ad brings a smile to Oregonians, who would like at least to slow down the immigration boom — if not actually make it a crime for developers to cross the border.

There is even a loose-knit group, whose members — though they prefer anonymity — are said to promote news stories going out of the state that cast bad reflections on Oregon. It is called the James G. Blaine Society for the 1884 Democratic presidential candidate defeated when his opponents labeled his party one of "rum, Romanism and rebellion."

The adverse publicity generated by this group and others — including reports of natural and man-made calamities — hopefully keeps people from wanting to move to the state.

Former Gov. Tom McCall, suspected of being a closet member of the society, a few years ago half jestingly described as "terrible" the action of a federal agency in declaring Portland and Eugene the most livable cities for their size in the nation. He said such designations could bring in hordes of people and destroy the very thing that attracted them to the state in the first place.

But the hard stand against the invaders has not worked.

Oregon, with an estimated 2,472,000 residents, gained only 18,300 more persons through births over deaths for the year 1978. But the state's population jumped 75,900 for the latest annual period marked by the Center for Population Research and Census at Portland State University.

The Oregon 2000 Commission has submitted a report that Oregon can expect to see its population increase by 1 million by the year 2000. It said the state's population is growing at 2 ½ times the national average, and the costs of growth are increasing out of proportion to the population hike.

Some Oregonians go the other way to California, however. Undoubtedly, many complain about Oregon's frequent rain. And that doesn't make Oregonians unhappy. In fact, there are T-shirts, cards, and booklets making jokes about how wet it is in the state: "You don't tan in Oregon, you rust."

Native Oregonians are not the only ones not wanting Californians to come into the state.

"I'm from Nebraska," says state Sen. L.B. Day, an executive of a Teamsters' cannery workers union in Salem. "We resent the Californians coming because there isn't enough room for us people from the Midwest here."

In Oregon the population is growing at 2½ times the national average. The state has begun a public relations campaign to keep out migrants from neighboring California. Some of the strongest no-growthers are former Californians.

When a federal agency declared Portland and Eugene, Ore., the two most livable cities of their size in the nation, former Gov. Tom McCall described the conclusion as "terrible." He said it would bring in hordes of new residents and destroy the character that made the cities livable in the first place.

People who move to New Hampshire "envision a lifestyle of the great American dream — fields and streams and happy people and happy kids," Bonnie Newman said. But her group has plotted trends that show New Hampshire's crime rate will eventually top the national rate if the current growth pace continues.

Santa Fe, N.M., has long had an ordinance saying buildings in its historic zone must be built in the centuries-old Indian pueblo style. Santa Fe has not had commercial air service since 1972 and, partly to keep too much growth out, city fathers have not tried to get it reinstated.

Resistance to new development for the sake of charm is not limited to fighting housing projects. Martha's Vineyard, Mass., this year rejected a plan to put a MacDonald's restaurant in a health food store on the island, which also has no traffic lights, neon signs or billboards.

Vineyard Gazette editor Henry Beetle Hough called the fast food restaurant "a symbol of the asphalt and chrome culture that we do not have here."

Growth controls are under attack by developers, who have filed suits charging the rules limit people's rights to live where they want and build where they want.

Low-income groups have forced courts to overturn some growth controls, particularly those requiring large lot zoning, by arguing they discriminate against the poor and minorities. With an eye on those court rulings, Boulder, Colo., threw a bonus for low-income housing into its growth restrictions.

But many courts have upheld controls that are backed up by well-documented long-range development plans and don't pull up the drawbridge against all newcomers.
